WOLCOTT WITHDRAWS.

Will Not Further Contest Senator Teller's Election.

Weekly Trade Review—United Mine Workers—Canal Treaty Signed—Franchise Tax Law — Bombardment of San Carlos—Decision In Favor of Settlers—Doblin Retracts.

The climax of the senatorial fight in Colorado came when ex-Senator Wolcott, the candidate of the so-called "Stalwart" wing of the Republican party, announced his practical withdrawal from any further contest, and urged the people of Colorado to accept the situation as it stands, by the election of Senator Henry M. Teller to succeed himself.

The announcement was made in a signed statement in which Mr. Wolcott charges certain Republican leaders associated with the anti-Wolcott forces in the Republican ranks with treachery, deliberate and continuous, although he disposes of others of the anti-Wolcott crowd by characterizing them as "dupes" of the main conspirators.

Continuing Mr. Wolcott said: "There were three joint sessions of the general assembly. At the last one 51 Democrats voted for Teller. No other joint session had been held and no Republican had voted in a joint session. The election of Mr. Teller was tinctured with fraud, first in the trickery of adjournment by the Democrats of the house; second, in the arbitrary and fraudulent expulsion of two legally elected senators.

Speaking of Mr. Teller, the ex-senator said that in no sense was he party to the frauds above referred to, although he was the beneficiary.

Expansion of Spring Trade.

Previously existing favorable conditions still rule. Spring trade shows further expansion, particularly in dry goods, such as linens, wash fabrics, underwear and hosiery. Clothing, shoes, hardware and hardwood lumber are active, and the volume of shipments of spring goods to fill orders offers still another problem for the congested transportation companies to solve.

Among the manufactured products the strength of iron and steel is noticeable. While weather conditions are unfavorable to ordinary building, and lumber is quiet, with final distributors a good volume of business is reported by producers. In fact the outlook is for a very active year in 1903 in building, but it is pointed out that in some cities the question of possible prices of labor and materials may exercise a checking effect upon this tendency.

The price situation is one of exceptional strength. Mild weather weakens the price of country produce, such as butter and eggs.

Sugar market is unsettled by uncertainties as to reciprocity arrangements with Cuba.

Cotton goods are strong, feeling the effect of the exceptional good spring trade already booked. Print cloths are one-eighth cent higher on the week. In dress goods jobbers note an expanding business, and men's wear woolens hold the advance of 5 to 10 per cent noted at the outset of the season. Raw wool is firmly held, and there is even some quotable advance noted on the week.

Decision In Favor of Settlers.

The U. S. supreme court has rendered through Justice Harlan an opinion affecting the Northern Pacific railroad land grant. The case was that of Peter and Henry Nelson, who located upon unsurveyed land within the Northern Pacific grant, in the then territory of Washington, in 1881.

This was after the railroad company had filed its general map showing its proposed line, but before it had filed its map of definite location.

In the opinion handed down it was held that the title of the settlers was better than that of the railroad company and that until the definite map was filed congress had control of the lands within the grant regardless of the general map.

In a dissenting opinion Justice Brewer said the opinion reverses the judgment of the court of 20 years ago by which the interior department had ever since controlled the dealings with disputes between the railroad company and settlers like the Nelsons.

Mine Workers Demand Raise.

The convention of the United Mine Workers of America in executive session at Indianapolis, Ind., completed the consideration of the wage scale and Secretary Wilson announced that there will be no more executive sessions.

The miners decided to demand an increase in wages of 12½ cents per ton on a run of mine basis, all coal to be paid for on that basis. A differential of 7 cents between pick and machine coal will be asked for.

The entire competitive district composed of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and the Pittsburg district of Pennsylvania is governed by this scale. The present run of mine rate in Indiana is 40 cents and the increase if granted by the operators, would make the rate of wages 51½ cents per ton. In the Pittsburg district it would be 55 cents, in Ohio 50 cents, and in Illinois 41½ cents.

Franchise Tax Law Unconstitutional.

The appellate division of the supreme court, third department, decides by a vote of three to two that the special franchise tax law of 1899 is unconstitutional in so far as it takes the power of taxing franchises from the local boards of assessors and gives it to a state board, thus violating the "home rule" principle of the state constitution.

The present decision affects the law only to the extent of removing the assessment from the jurisdiction of the state commission. It leaves the franchises still in the list of taxable property, to which, as the four opinions unanimously agree, the legislature had the power to add them, and permits the local boards of assessors to tax them at their full value.

Canal Treaty Signed.

The treaty between the United States and Colombia for the construction of the Panama canal by the United States was signed in Washington.

The canal treaty provides for the payment by the United States to Colombia of $10,000,000 in gold and $250,000 annually thereafter. The lease of a zone six miles wide for 100 years is granted. The United States has the right to send troops to protect its property in case Colombia can not do so.

The treaty is identical with that drawn by this government several months ago and at that time submitted to the Colombian government with the single exception of the amount of the annuity to be paid Colombia for the right of way of the canal.

Bombardment of San Carlos.

The bombardment of Fort San Carlos by the German cruisers Vinita, Panther and Falke was continued Wednesday afternoon until 6 o'clock. It was resumed next morning at daybreak.

The first shells were hurled at the fort at 4 o'clock at long range. At 6 o'clock the Panther, being of light draught, closed in and again became actively engaged. The fort replied. At 8 o'clock the engagement was proceeding as fiercely as that of Wednesday.

Twelve dead and 15 wounded Venezuelan soldiers were counted in the fort at 7 o'clock Thursday night.

Death of the Governor's Sister.

Miss Ophelia Odell, elder sister of Governor Odell, died Sunday at the home of her father, ex-Mayor Odell in Grand street, Newburg, N. Y. She had been ill about a week with an attack of the grip. A day or two ago complications developed which made her condition serious. Death was due to oedema of the lungs. Miss Odell had not been in good health for some time. The governor and other members of the family were at her bedside when she died. Ex-Mayor Odell, who is just recovering from an attack of grip, especially felt the shock of his daughter's death.

Retracts His Statements.

Philip Doblin, who testified before the house committee on naval affairs that he had approached Congressman Lessler of New York with an offer of money to influence his vote on the submarine boat bill, and who made the further statement that he had been told there might be $1,000 in it for him, made the astounding statement before that committee Monday that he had made statements Saturday which were not true and that he wanted to retract his statement that Lemuel E. Quigg had tendered a bribe to him.

Nearly Ready For Commercial Use.

William Marconi said in New York city that his wireless system would be ready for commercial use by the public in an exceedingly short time, within two or three months at the least. This statement was made at the office of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company of America at the close of a meeting of the board of directors of the company called in order that Marconi might personally acquaint the members of the board with the results of his recent experiments and work at Wellfleet.

Rent Exceeds His Salary.

Ambassador Tower at Berlin has nearly closed the lease of a stately residence on Koenigsplatz, near the Reichstag building and overlooking the Thiergarten. The property belongs to the estate of the late Herr Planzheim, the banker. It is larger than the French embassy and is somewhat smaller than the British embassy. The rent considerably exceeds the ambassador's salary, which is true also in the case of the American embassies at London, Paris and St. Petersburg.

Carnation In Coat Lapel.

The McKinley league at Cincinnati has issued a call for all to observe McKinley's birthday next Thursday, January 29, by wearing a carnation in the lapel of the coat. As there is opposition to having any more legal holidays this simple observation of the day without any interference with business duties, in all that the league contemplates and efforts are being made to have the first observance a success.

House Leaders Defeated.

The house leaders went down to defeat when the house by a vote of 146 to 128 rejected the Philippine coinage bill, reported by the insular affairs committee, and a bipartisan substitute offered by the minority for the introduction of American currency and the American coinage system in the islands.

Elected Bishop of Mississippi.

Rev. Arthur S. Lloyd, D.D., general secretary of the Episcopal board of missions, was elected bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Mississippi to succeed the late Rev. Dr. Hugh Miller Thompson. Dr. Lloyd's headquarters are at present in New York city.

M'KINLEY'S MEMORY

Notable Tribute to the Dead President.

President Roosevelt the Chief Orator. Made a Beautiful and Heartfelt Tribute to the Distinguished Dead. Many Prominent Men Present. Governor Nash Unable to Attend.

Canton, O., Jan. 28. — President Roosevelt last night participated in a notable tribute to the memory of President McKinley. He was the principal orator at a banquet given under the auspices of the Canton Republican League in commemoration of the birthday of McKinley.

Surrounded by friends, neighbors and business and political associates of the dead president, he pronounced a brilliant and eloquent eulogy upon the life and works of McKinley.

It was an eulogy regarded by many as the most beautiful and heartfelt tribute ever paid to the memory of the distinguished dead.

The banquet was held in the Grand Opera House, the seats being removed from the pit and the house entirely refloored for the occasion. The interior of the building was beautifully decorated with flags and flowers, the floral decorations being particularly elaborate.

Festoons of flags were arranged at the balcony and gallery and 13 great banquet boards were massed with roses and carnations mingled with smilax and ferns. An orchestra of 25 pieces furnished music.

Among the 425 guests assembled about the boards were some of the most distinguished men in the public and political life of the country. At the speaker's table besides President Roosevelt were seated Judge W. R. Day, who acted as toastmaster; Secretary Root, Secretary Cortelyou, General S. M. B. Young, General Leonard Wood, General Luke E. Wright, vice governor of the Philippines; Surgeon General Rixey, Captain Cowles, the president's naval aide; Colonel Theodore A. Bingham, his military aide; Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Brigham, Representative R. W. Taylor, James W. Grant, Colonel Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, J. G. Schmidlapp, H. H. Kohlaaat of Chicago, Charles Emory Smith, Judge Harter, Judge Smyser and Alfred C. Tyson.

At the tables throughout the large auditorium were men of state and national prominence.

Governor Nash of Ohio who was expected to be present to respond to the toast "Ohio," was unable to leave his home on account of illness. His place on the program was taken by James J. Grant of Canton.

Soon after the close of the reception at the Hotel McKinley, President Roosevelt and party walked in a driving rain from the hotel to the banquet hall, half a square distant. Despite the inclemency of the weather, the streets were thronged with people. Special precautions were taken to insure the safety of the president and his pathway to the Opera House was lined with secret service officers, policemen and soldiers.

As the president entered the banquet hall the assemblage rose and cheered him heartily. The demonstration—the first of the day—was a personal tribute to the president, which he acknowledged with evident pleasure. As soon as the president and party were seated the doors of the balcony and gallery were opened and in a few minutes both were crowded.

ELMIRA CHARTER.

Two Measures Presented Before Senate Cities Committee.

Albany, Jan. 28.—Two former candidates for governor of New York state, J. Sloat Fassett and John B. Stanchfield, appeared before the cities committee of the senate and discussed the Elmira charter amendment bills.

The measure was introduced by Senator Stewart and is favored by the Republicans of that city while the other was framed by the Democratic majority of the common council and was introduced by Senator Grady, the minority leader.

Mr. Stanchfield claimed that the Stewart bill was a gerrymander of the wards to give the Republicans a majority of the common council. Mr. Fassett asserted that the purpose of the rearrangement of the wards was to equalize the voting population. The committee will pass on the bill in executive session to-day.

Ex-Senator Baldwin Dead.

Wellsville, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Hon. Sumner Baldwin is dead at his home here, aged 70 years. He was a member of the assembly in 1876 and 1877 and was state senator in 1882. He was succeeded in the senate by J. Sloat Fassett.

Only Two Cruisers at La Guayra.

La Guayra, Venezuela, Jan. 28.—The Italian cruiser Giovanni Bausan left here at noon Tuesday for Port of Spain, Trinidad, leaving the seven Venezuelan prices remaining in these waters. Two British cruisers remain here.

Dispute About Acre Territory.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 28.—Although Brazil has ordered troops to the Bolivian frontier and has sent warships up the Amazon as a result of the dispute between the two countries on the question of the ownership of the Acre territory, no serious results are probable.

LOADING THE CANAL BILL.

Republican Conferees Determined to Add $50,000,000 to the Undertaking.

Albany, Jan. 28.—While ardent advocates of the canal were in long and serious session yesterday contemplating the expenditure of $82,000,000 for the improvement of the state waterways, there was gathered in another room of the state capitol a set of men representing in a great degree the dominant element in Republican politics, planning to so amend the canal bill as to defeat it unless their demands are granted.

Of the dozen conferees the mention of a few names only is necessary to demonstrate that the dominent element of the Republican party is represented in the proposed amending of the bill. Lieutenant Governor Frank Higgins, Speaker of the Assembly S. Fred Nixon, Senators Jotham P. Allds, leader of the majority in the assembly; James S. Rogers, Senator William Armstrong and a dozen others of lesser note, practically decided that unless a $50,000,000 state bond issue was added to the $82,000,000 proposed in the canal bill no canal measure would be allowed to pass the legislature and go to the governor.

The additional $50,000,000 asked for is to be expended, according to the plans of this contingent, in building good roads. The farmers and good roads interests are to be appealed to to support the proposition.

These legislators contend that the counties outside of the direct line of the canal receive no direct benefit from the vast expenditure of money proposed under the $82,000,000 canal act. They say that if the canal is to be made available to these outside counties there must be good roads for the farmers and producers to convey their produce to the canal for transportation; that these counties must depend upon good roads for their increase in business as the canal counties depend upon the canal.

Senator Allds argued that by compelling the counties under the Higbie-Armstrong good roads act to pay 30 per cent of the cost of improvement and the property owners 20 per cent the farmer was doubly taxed, because he also contributed by indirect taxation to the state's 50 per cent. Besides they would have to pay a proportion of the interest on bonds for canal improvement. He urged that the state should build great highways throughout its entire length while the counties should be asked to build only the smaller roads leading into them.

Speaker Nixon contended that the eastern part of the state, benefiting directly by a canal built through its territory, should not be averse to assisting the western and southwestern parts of the state to build good roads.

It was also contended that if the state compelled counties benefited to pay half the cost of constructing a state road the same method should be applied to the canal unless the counties directly benefited by the canal were willing that the good roads proposition for $50,000,000 should be attached to the canal bill.

So far as the conferees could determine there were at least 31 available votes staunchly for a good roads attachment to the canal bill, 22 which it was believed might be obtained very easily and a dozen others that a little influence would draw; including in this tabulation the assembly only. In the senate it was believed the odds were still greater and the good roads proposition would defeat the canal legislation unless added to the bill.

The counties reckoned as certainly in the good roads column are said to be Allegany, Broome, Cattaraugus, Cayuga, Chautauqua, Chemung, Chenango, Columbia, Cortland, Delaware, Genesee, Sullivan, Otsego, St. Lawrence, Jefferson, Tompkins, Steuben, Yates, Schuyler, Wyoming, Orleans, Suffolk, and Nassau.

Those said to be doubtful and which may be brought over to the good roads column are Albany, Monroe, Oswego, Lewis, Rensselaer, Ulster, Dutchess, Putnam, Rockland, Greene, Fulton and Hamilton.

In addition it is believed that Kings and some parts of Erie counties will furnish some votes for the proposition.

The total amount of bonds which these conferees demand be issued in the bill is $132,000,000 and under the figures presented by the governor for the $82,000,000 appropriation, with 50 years interest, this would mean an expenditure for the state of $272,000,000.

This is the third directly antagonistic proposition to the canal improvement bill, the other two having been presented by Senators Lewis of Monroe and Ambler of Columbia. Mr. Lewis' proposition being to have the United States government continue its work of surveying for a ship canal, while Senator Ambler's suggestion was to allow the sale of the canals to either corporations, individuals or the United States government.

Cleveland and Olney.

New York, Jan. 28.—Former Secretary of State Richard Olney breakfasted with Grover Cleveland at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mr. Olney came to the city Monday night and had a conference with Mr. Cleveland following the Hewitt memorial meeting, at which the former president made an address. Mr. Cleveland was accompanied to the hotel by ex-Mayor Edward M. Shepard, who was the Democratic candidate for mayor of New York in 1901.

Sixty Thousand People Banquetted.

Calcutta, Jan. 28.—In celebration of the coronation of King Edward, 60,000 poor people were banquetted Tuesday afternoon. A display of fireworks, which followed, was witnessed by about 250,000 persons.

FOUR FREIGHTS IN SMASH-UP.

Peculiar Wreck Near Wilmore Blocks Pennsy Traffic For Hours.

Johnstown, Jan. 27.—Four freight trains were involved in one of the most peculiar wrecks in the recollection of railroad men in this section at a point midway between Wilmore and Portage on the Pennsylvania railroad.

The entire system of the company on this section was blocked for more than four hours as a congestion of freight and passenger traffic both east and west the like of which had never been seen on the mountain district for many years.

A train of empties westbound had passed the Portage tower on track No. 3 about 4 o'clock on a green signal. Half way between Portage and Wilmore it was stopped. Soon afterward a second train followed on the same track. It is claimed that the engineer was given a green signal, but when No. 1838 got the signal from the flagman on the train ahead the engineer was unable to stop and his heavy engine plowed into the caboose, demolishing it and wrecking a half dozen cars.

Standing on track No. 2 was a West Penn train, running on a fast schedule, hauling through freight. On track No. 1, directly opposite was standing a slow freight, the cars, which were big affairs, being loaded with coal.

When the two westbound trains collided the force of the collision was so great that the wrecked cars darted against the West Penn train on track No. 2, wrecking several of the cars, and two of the latter fell against the coal train on track No. 1, wrecking several of the big steel cars. Thus it was that the entire system was put out of business.

An investigation was started at Pittsburg. The property loss to the railroad company is estimated at not less than $10,000. It is regarded as little less than a miracle that none of the trainmen was injured.

TENSION AT CHARLEROI.

More Votes Polled at Primaries Than Ever Before In Town's History.

Charleroi, Jan. 27.—Charleroi Republicans have just participated in one of the warmest local political battles in the history of the party. Their primaries were held Saturday night and more votes were polled than has been the case at any election or previous primaries ever held here. Excitement ran high and when the results were announced they provided a genuine surprise. The tickets were:

For Burgess, John Major; tax collector, Frank C. McCloskey; council, George Snyder, F. M. Warnock; school directors, J. Harshman, C. G. Collins; constable, C. W. Allbright.

Major, for burgess, won by a majority of 15 votes. The total number cast was 916.

The Democratic primaries are to be held next Wednesday and it is likely that Joseph Elliott, who has an unusually strong following, will be put up to oppose Major for the office of burgess.

Raw Pork Fatal to Family.

Youngstown, O., Jan. 27.—Mrs. Minnie Fallo, aged 21, is believed to have died of trichinosis as a result of eating raw pork. Her five-year-old child is suffering from the same symptoms and is expected to die at any time. The father, Joseph Fallo, died two weeks ago last Friday. The family refused to allow the doctors to hold autopsies and they are undecided as to the real cause. According to the reports of the neighbors the family never cooked the pork which they ate. They protested that they liked it better raw than when it was cooked.

Railroad Wants Land.

York, Jan. 27.—A number of citizens of York have been notified by the Northern Central railroad that the land at Falls View occupied by summer cottages will be needed for the new freight line cut off between New Holland and Mayersville and that the cottages must be removed at once. Ely Shelley's cigar factory will also have to be torn down to make way for the improvements. The company recently forced the owners figures for the land which were declined. The matter may be carried into the courts.

Medical Society Behind Proposed Bill.

Sharon, Pa., Jan. 27.—Sharon doctors are giving active support to a bill to be introduced in the legislature at this session which is aimed to stop the treating of patients by Christian Scientists and Faith Cularists. The measure provides that applicants, to practice in the state, must undergo a satisfactory examination and secure a license from the prothonotary of the county in which they reside. The movement was started by the State Medical society.

Steel Trust After Plant at Kokomo.

Richmond, Ind., Jan. 27.—The American Steel & Wire company is going after some of the large independent plants, and if negotiations now under way are successful the plant at Kokomo, Ind., will pass into the hands of the trust. The trust is also after an independent plant in Ohio and others in the East. About 700 men work at Kokomo.

Sleeping Couple Asphyxiated.

Dayton, O., Jan. 27.—J. H. Bierbaum and wife, Louisa, were asphyxiated by natural gas here Sunday. The gas had gone out, and then, turning on again while the husband and wife were sleeping strangled them.

GOV. PENNYPACKER'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Citizens of Pennsylvania—The event in which we participate presents some unusual features. This state has a population of 6,302,115, greater than that of England in the time of Elizabeth, twice that of Holland when the [illegible] and twice that of the United States when Washington became president. Her resources are almost boundless. Her revenues amount to the annual sum of $17,727,432.46. The floating indebtedness of about three and a half millions of dollars which existed four years ago has been paid off during the [illegible] substantially without debt of any kind. She pays each year for the maintenance of public schools and of charities more than any other American commonwealth. The lands of her citizens are not taxed for her benefit, and the tax rate in her large cities is less than in any other of the great municipalities of the country. The governorship of Pennsylvania is an office therefore which is one of the great executive places of the earth. No man, whatever may be his capacity or what the manner in which he has been called, ought to approach it save with humble steps and with a grave sense [illegible] Relying upon Divine Providence, proud of the exceptional achievements of this forceful and efficient people and depending for support upon their virtue and good sense, I have taken in your presence the oath of office and I go forward to the performance of the duties and to see to it so far as I may be able that under the constitution, the laws are faithfully administered.

It is my wish always within reasonable limits to confer with all persons who may have facts to impart or conclusions to present, and it is my purpose to consult especially with those who in common parlance are called politicians. There is no more dangerous public vice than the prevalent affectation of disrespect for those who are engaged in the performance of the [illegible] of the people [illegible] and the nation, because it is in effect an attack upon popular government, and its tendency is to undermine our institutions. There was a time when proper deference was shown even to those officials lowest in authority and the cultivation of a like spirit is a much-needed public virtue.

There is too much legislation. Sir William Blackstone said in 1758 that "The common law of England has fared like other venerable edifices of antiquity which rash and inexperienced workmen have ventured to new dress and refine with all the rage for modern improvements." This truth needs to be reiterated. It is far better to leave the law alone unless the [illegible] is plain. Stability and certainty are more important than absolute accuracy. It is wiser not to disturb an imperfect rule to which business relations have become adapted and with which the community has become familiar. The purpose of the constitution, in making the sessions of the legislature biennial, instead of annual, was that the bulk of legislation should be lessened and longer consideration given to it, and our duty is to heed the provision.

The modern tendency to invent new crimes ought to be curbed. To obliterate the marked line which distinguishes between mere breaches of contract and crimes is to bring the law itself into disrepute. To threaten with imprisonment him who has filled a bottle entrusted to him, the contents of which he has bought, or him who sells a railroad ticket, the evidence of a right of transportation for which he has paid, is no doubt a convenience to corporations and others in enforcing their contracts, but it takes from the prison much of its effect as a restraint upon those who do evil. Juries refuse to convict where they believe the charge ought not to be sustained, even though the facts come within the terms of a statute, and thus men are taught to disregard the law. The principles of right and wrong are immutable and as old as the human race, and extreme care ought to be exercised in adding to the list of offenses things done which were never known to be offenses until they become "statutory."

The constitution directs that at the completion of each United States census there shall be a senatorial and representative reapportionment of the state. There is practical difficulty in making a senatorial reapportionment in the manner directed by that instrument. If these difficulties prove to be insurmountable then the constitution must be interpreted like every other written instrument in such a way as to reconcile inconsistencies and carry out the purposes which it was intended to serve. A serious effort ought to be made to apportion the state according to its terms, and if there are any of the counties which cannot be made to fit into the scheme then such plan as will most closely approximate the required result ought to be adopted.

The present ballot law suggested in the interest of reform and adopted by the legislature in an effort for the improvement of public affairs has proven in practice to be both cumbersome and inefficient. It needs either careful amendment or reconstruction. Our system of government depends primarily upon the right of every elector to vote according to his judgment and preference, without interference by or obstruction from any other person or influence and to have all of the votes accounted [illegible] In providing the necessary means it ought to be remembered [illegible] they are and the less sophisticated the [illegible] The great mass of voters have neither the time nor the inclination when they reach the polls to study the methods of voting, however meritorious they may be, and the plan adopted ought to be one easy for them to understand. The thought that something ought to be done by means of the law to encourage independent voting and to make it difficult for the prohibitionist, Socialist, Democrat or Republican to vote his full party [illegible] would be in accord with the bent of the voter which should not be [illegible]

In Pennsylvania, as in all of the other American states, the principles upon which the right of eminent domain is based have been too often neglected and forgotten. The constitutions of both the United States and this state protect the citizen in his individual right of property. But when there is public need for the good of the community the state may intervene, and, giving him compensation, compel him to surrender his individual right for the general welfare. The test is the public necessity, and the thought upon the part of corporations or individuals that if they had his property they could use it to advantage is utterly foreign to the inquiry. There ought to be some means provided to ascertain the existence of such public need, before franchises are granted giving the right of eminent domain. Yet under our general railroad law any nine or more persons may unite upon their own judgment of the profitableness of the venture to foul streams, cut through forests and destroy homesteads. Often they are mistaken both as to the need and the profit, and this is learned after and not before the harm has been done. Eminent jurists have doubted the constitutionality of the act, and at all events its wisdom in this respect is more than questionable. In our haste to accumulate we are in some ways in danger of losing sight of manhood and even of fundamental principles. In my view, before any franchise is granted, either by special or general law, involving a disturbance of the individual right of property and before any exercise of the enormous power of eminent domain by a private corporation there ought to be express assent by the state itself, based upon an ascertainment of the public need. This would mean the employment of a competent engineer to give information to the proper department. If hereafter, in any way, the state is to exercise control over public roads there will be further need for such technical information.

In Pennsylvania conflicts between concentrated capital and organized labor are of frequent occurrence and often result in cessation of production, [illegible] earnings, violations of the law and disturbance and inconvenience to the community. They present some of the most difficult and complicated problems with which modern administration is confronted. They occur more frequently here than elsewhere because of the great number of our industries requiring the employment of masses of men, many of them born in other lands, and some of them uneducated, unfamiliar with our language and indifferent to our institutions. While it is difficult to prevent these occurrences and the situation when it arises and becomes acute is perplexing, there are certain principles governing the relation of the state to them which may be announced with safety. Whatever tends to bring about an improvement in the condition of the masses of mankind and assists in their cultivation and elevation is an advantage to the state and ought to be encouraged by legislation. Especially is this true in a state where every man is a factor in the government. There is no corresponding good to the state from the mere accumulation of unused resources in the hands of an individual. The state is therefore interested within reasonable bounds in bringing about a condition of things in which in the distribution of rewards resulting from business ventures capital shall have less of profit and labor more of compensation. No capitalist is strong enough and no laborer is insignificant enough to escape obedience to the law. When the laborer sells his labor for a compensation he ought to render the service during the period of the contract. No man should be permitted to interfere upon any pretence whatever with another who may choose to sell his labor, and violence from whatever source it may come should be promptly and rigidly suppressed, using whatever force may be necessary for the purpose.

Pennsylvania has been very generous and bountiful in handing her great natural resources and while perhaps this method of treating them has not been unwise the query arises whether it would not be well to give heed to the future. The commercial idea put briefly and in gross is that forests, coal, oil and iron are to be sent into the market as soon and as rapidly as possible, in order that they may be converted into money and the men of today may live in luxury and enjoyment. The duty of the statesman is to look beyond the indulgence of the time, to regard these resources as gifts of Providence, to be husbanded with care and used as need requires rather than wasted or poured upon glutted markets, with a sense that when once exhausted they can never be restored. While it is a satisfaction to see libraries in England and Universities in Chicago being erected from the outcome of the iron and oil of Pennsylvania, do we [illegible] liberality, we may be pardoned a feeling of regret that so much of the wealth of her production is controlled and utilized elsewhere. I suggest that the legislature consider the propriety of imposing a slight tax upon some one of her productions the proceeds to be applied to the betterment of our roads, such a tax as would not be a serious burden, but would result in security for our own people a proportion of the benefit of the natural deposits. If done at all the tax so imposed should be so small in amount that it could be regarded even by the producers themselves as fair and equitable.

No people are ever really great who are merely [illegible] their shrines and [illegible] The history of the world shows that a [illegible] is a more lasting and [illegible] The theses which Luther nailed to the church door at Wittenberg still sway the minds of men and the [illegible] when they died. What would Athens give for the immortality of Greece without the memories of Marathon or of England without those of Runnymede? T. P. O'CONNOR.

T. P. O'Connor, the well known Irish Nationalist leader, has branched out in journalism. He has just started publication of a newspaper which he calls T. P.'s Weekly. It is at once a personal and literary journal. He himself tells anecdotes of well known people in that inimitable style of his which everybody knows and enjoys. The Weekly is being well received, according to reports from London.

a large extent determined, in the French and Indian War, the question whether the American Continent should be dominated by Latin or Teuton, involving the destinies of the human race, and around Philadelphia in eastern Pennsylvania the real struggle of the Revolutionary War occurred. The good example set by Philadelphia in its care of Independence Hall and Congress Hall should be followed by the state. The fields of Fort Necessity where Washington first became known, of Bushy Run where Bouquet won his important victory, and the camp ground of Valley Forge should be tenderly cared for and preserved. The state has appointed a commission to provide for Valley Forge and much of the ground has been secured. The rest should be taken and the reasonable needs of the Commission must be supplied.

There is one institution of learning which occupies a unique relation to the state. The constitution of 1776 for the first time in America made it the duty of the state to provide for higher education by the erection of a university. In accordance with this provision the state took hold of the college of which Thomas Penn had been the patron, Dr. William Smith the real founder and Benjamin Franklin an adjunct, about which clustered these associations as well as the memory of George Whitefield, and made of it a university and continued to provide for it by gifts of lands. Control was assured under the Act of 1791 by making the governor of the state president and member of the board of trustees and requiring it to report to the legislature the condition of its funds. In later years both duty and relation were forgotten and control was permitted to slip away. The institution has become one of the most useful and efficient now existing. It shall be my effort to restore the relation of patronage and control, the outgrowth of colonial conditions and made a constitutional requirement, and to regain and retain for the state the credit for this early and unprecedented recognition of the cause of learning.

Experience has shown that men are neither strong enough nor virtuous enough to be entrusted for any length of time with unlimited and irresponsible power. Institutions of the highest utility when established often become dangerous to the community. Even the church has been at times used for the worst of personal ends. The doctrine of the liberty of the press, conceived at a time when it was necessary to dissipate the movements of arbitrary power has become in recent days too often a cover for base and ignoble purposes, and like the sanctuaries of old a place of retreat where any wrongdoer may secure immunity from punishment. Sensational journals have arisen all over the land, the owners in concealment and the writers and purveyors unidentified, and they have thriven by propagating crime and disseminating falsehood and scandal, by promulgating disorder and anarchy, by attacks upon individuals and by assaults upon government and the agencies of the people. They are a terror to the household, a detriment to the public service, and an [illegible] to the course of justice. [illegible] time is near at hand and [illegible] means to prevent the development of [illegible] conspicuous instances of [illegible] I know of no reason why Pennsylvania, which has been [illegible] in so many [illegible] should not take the lead in a united effort to improve manners and morals by such a reform. Our constitution imposes responsibility for the abuse of the liberty of the press and I suggest for the consideration of the legislature whether or not it would be well to extend to such cases the law of negligence as developed by the decisions of our courts, so that there should be liability in damages for the physical and mental suffering caused by publications made without "reasonable care."

I further suggest an inquiry as to the propriety of requiring the names and residences of the owners of newspapers to be published with each issue. It may be that on consideration the legislature in its wisdom will be able to devise other means which, while [illegible] will tend to eliminate the unworthy.

Upon a like occasion in 1738 Andrew Hamilton the eminent man who established the fame of the Philadelphia lawyer and who built the Pennsylvania State House, since adopted by [illegible] Hall, wrote: "We enjoy a greater share of civil and religious liberty than any of our neighbors." Pennsylvania took from the cavalier the coat of mail with which the habits of the middle ages had encased and bound him. She taught the narrow and bigoted Puritan to be cheerful and liberal. She fixed, in the national constitution those principles, taught by William Penn two and a quarter centuries ago, which have come to be typical of American civilization. She needs to overcome certain tendencies to divergence and dissension existing among her people. She wants to have no feuds and factions and no traditions of Quaker and churchman to hinder her efforts or rend her garments. There must be no separate interests of city and country. She wants to feel a real pride in the lives of Penn and Wayne, of Rittenhouse and Meade, and to still with her frown of displeasure those at home and abroad who cry aloud against her. Pittsburg must aid Philadelphia to find an outlet to the sea as Antwerp, Glasgow, Manchester and other inland towns have done before, and Philadelphia must aid Pittsburg in her effort to unite the vast population about the headwaters of the Ohio and to outdo the chief city of the west, and both must be not for themselves alone but for the good of the state and its people. And then will soon be realized what has been prophesied by many clear-headed observers, and Pennsylvania will take her place, not foremost alone in achievement and traditions, but in wealth and population among the American states.

Interchange of Opinion between Chairman Gray and Attorney Darrow.

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.—When the anthracite coal strike commission adjourned for the day, the 400th witness summoned before the arbitrators was being examined. Of the 400, 174 were called by the striking mine workers, 155 by the non-union men, 63 by the operators and eight by the commission.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western coal company concluded its testimony and the miners began the presentation of its side of the controversy.

The companies yet to be heard are the Lehigh Valley Coal company, Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal company, Markle Brothers, and about 60 other independent operators and the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company. After the coal companies end their case the miners will take up some time in examining witnesses in rebuttal.

There was an interchange of opinion between Chairman Gray and Attorney Darrow for the miners on the question of the rights of the union men. Mr. Darrow believed a union man had the right to refuse a non-union man the use of cars in the mines and also had the right to use every power within the law in persuading union men from working with non-union workers. The unionists, he said, have no right to kill, assault and slander any man. Chairman Gray remarked that the employer has his rights too; that is, he has the right to refuse to employ union labor. Mr. Darrow agreed with him.

Thomas Williams, who is a district superintendent for the Lackawanna, testified that the steam men do not work very hard at night and had a chance to sleep. On cross-examination he said the company does not permit its men to sleep while on duty. The day engineers have 15 minutes for lunch and work 10 hours a day, and engineers on duty at night work 14 hours.

A. S. Baker of Scranton, auditor of the mining department of the Lackawanna railroad, presented to the commission a summary of the wages statement of the contract miners for 1901. It showed that some of the men earned less than $100 in the year, while others made amounts ranging from $100 to $600.

A statement giving the wages of all classes of company men, that is men who work by the day or week, was also presented. These men have demanded a 25 per cent reduction in the hours of labor with no reduction in pay. The average wages paid these men in 1901 ranged from $434.30 for slate pickers (boys) to $934.04 for boiler inspectors. The deckage in the amounted to 2 per cent and only 3½ per cent of the employes of the company live in company houses.

The Lackawanna company here rested its case and the Temple Iron company began calling its witnesses. The attorneys called five men on behalf of the Temple company, all of them mine foremen, who testified to conditions in and about the collieries over which they have charge. Much of their testimony was in contradiction of evidence adduced when the mine workers were presenting their side of the controversy to the commission in Scranton.

Cambridge Springs a Winter Resort, and Why.

The idea that because "a change is needed" it is necessary at this season to go to some much warmer climate, is not always correct. Such a course may sometimes be necessary, but in nervous troubles, disorder of the digestive functions, kidney complaints and many others, nothing is gained, and much is often lost by breathing an enervating atmosphere when vitality and vigor most are needed. Besides, one is seldom comfortable in such places because there are cold days there, with no facilities to meet them.

The best place to thoroughly enjoy and benefit by cold weather is in a dry, ozonic atmosphere, with ample preparations for keeping warm, a generous table, good society, opportunity for exercise indoors, such as enclosed balconies, sun parlors, etc. Add to these the health-giving waters of Cambridge Springs, Pa., and you have an ideal place to spend the winter, or any part of it. If not informed as to Cambridge Springs ask any Erie Ticket Agent for illustrated booklet, or send to D. W. Cooke, G. P. A., Erie Railroad, New York.

Break It Up Early.

If troubled with a cough or cold, break it up at once. A few doses of Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar will suffice in the beginning, but an affection of this kind is like a fire, the longer it is allowed to rage unchecked, the more time it takes to extinguish it. At any stage of the complaint, however, short of confirmed consumption, this powerful and wholesome remedy persistently administered, will unquestionably effect a cure. NEXT SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THE Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, who will in all human probability be elected Speaker of the House of the Fifty-eighth Congress, has the distinction of having served longer in the lower legislative chamber than any of his thirty-four predecessors. The Eighteenth Congressional District of Illinois first sent him to represent it at the National Capital in the year that General Grant defeated Horace Greeley for the Presidency, and he has done so continuously ever since, with the one exception of the Fifty-second session, '90 to '92, when he was made to stay at home by a Democrat named Busey.

His election to the next highest office in the nation will be the realization of a long cherished ambition with Mr. Cannon, and an honor which has been won through exceptional services. He was born at Newgarden, near Guilford Courthouse, in 1836. He went to Indiana early with his parents, where he received only a common-school education. At fourteen he hired out as a clerk in a country store, and five years later began the study of law. Deciding that there was not much honor for a prophet in his own country he concluded to go to Vermilion County, Illinois, to begin his practice. That first year in his profession, 1858, was pretty hard pulling for the future Speaker of the House, and there is no denying that he would have come to actual want if a friend had not stood for his board bill. It was not in the young lawyer's make-up, however, to allow difficulties to daunt him. By hard work and untiring perseverance each succeeding year saw his influence broaden and his practice enlarge. With his inborn aggressiveness he was soon [illegible] in 1861 he was elected County Attorney, a position he held until 1868. His experience as counsel in cases of every [illegible] years before he became a member of Congress in 1872, undoubtedly fitted him for the useful place he has filled there.

Mr. Cannon is one of the oldest and ablest veterans in public life. Indeed, he will be the oldest man who has ever occupied the Speaker's chair. Through all of his long career his bitterest enemies have never been able to connect his name in the remotest way with any scandal. He is a rough-and-tumble fighter; in debate he is not choice in the use of his adjectives, but he has a keen intellect, unimpeachable honesty, and a character of sterling worth. He is well known as one of the most conservative members of the House. As Chairman of the Appropriations Committee he has had control of the supply bills, and with so jealous care has he watched the proposed expenditures that he has fallen heir to the late Mr. Hoffman's sobriquet, "The watch dog of the Treasury."

KING CHULALONGKORN, OF SIAM.

It is reported that he will soon pay a visit to the United States.

THE SQUARE PAPER CAP.

How to Make the Kind Worn by Workmen in Cartoons.

If you are a workman you would, perhaps, like to have one of those neat looking square paper caps such as the brawny and handsome workmen of the cartoons wear.

Edward A. Loos, a chemist, sends to the Philadelphia Record an interesting letter, wherein he describes these caps and tells how they are made. Thus he who does as Mr. Loos bids in his letter, following the accompanying diagram carefully, may build for himself in a few minutes a cheap, strong and durable working hat.

"There appeared some time ago," writes Mr. Loos, "some remarks about the conventional headgear of the workingman of the cartoon. This is not, as seemed to be supposed, a portion of a flour bag, but a sheet of paper, about nineteen by twenty-three inches, folded into a cap. This sheet is folded so as to form a rectangle four and a half inches by seven inches, in the centre, as indicated by the lines AB, CD, EF and GH in the diagram. The sides and ends are then turned up to form a sort of box, to do which it is necessary to make diagonal creases as shown. MS, for example, being made by bringing MH up to MD—shown by the folded paper—the triangular projections at the corners being folded up along the sides of the box. Now, by a little patient manipulation the edges of this box are all turned down outwardly for about one inch of the depth. This turn is then repeated, it being a little less troubles one to make the second turn. In this way a surprisingly strong cap is produced."

How to Start a Balky Horse.

A balky horse and a load of coal caused considerable excitement at the railroad station, and by the aid of Garrett Duryea, an experienced horseman, bystanders were taught a practical lesson in starting equines with a bad temper. The horse refused to draw the load and would not move an inch despite all kind of endeavors and suggestions until Duryea arrived and commenced to apply the whip lightly to the animal's fore legs. Suddenly the horse started ahead on a trot for Uniondale, where the coal was to be taken. Duryea walked away unencumbered with the plaudits of the spectators who witnessed his successful feat.

"I never knew that trick to fail in starting a balky horse," he said. "They can't stand any whipping on the fore legs. If you ever have a horse that will not go, just try it." Brooklyn Eagle.

Acting and Drawing.

"To a group of friends Elton Lotry observed: "Acting is not like drawing. You make a line. If it is wrong you rub it out at once and make another. [illegible] that is [illegible] there is no altering. It must stand. I often feel as if I must cry to the audience, 'Oh, that is wrong, not as I meant it to be, let me act that part or sentence over again!'" San Francisco Argonaut.

with this class of traffic, and the wagon illustrated herewith, with two floors, is one of the principal types in use, designed for the purpose. The upper floor is raised when the wagon is used for cattle and lowered into position when the two floors are required for sheep. These wagons are run coupled together, in trains of twenty or more wagons, each wagon containing an average of 200 sheep.

In the present design the loading and unloading are facilitated by gates in the upper as well as the lower floor continuous throughout the train when the wagons are coupled.

The upper floor consists of four flaps or sections hinged to the sides of the wagon, this arrangement being found to involve less complication than lifting or lowering it by gearing, as is sometimes done. The floor is carried on six bearers of pitch pine, three inches by four and a half inches, strengthened by wrought iron plates one-eighth inch thick screwed on to one side. When the lower floor only is used the upper one is turned up and safely secured by pins and cotters, four of the bearers being disposed at the sides of the wagon underneath the middle rail, which carries the hinges, but owing to the width of the wagon in proportion to its length, it is impossible to accommodate all in this position, each end one being placed slightly across [illegible] serves the purpose of joining and making [illegible]

Leprosy in France.

The revelation that leprosy exists in France to such an extent as to call for the erection of a special hospital has caused quite a scare in Paris. It appears that there are nearly a score of cases under treatment in the St. Louis Hospital, and the Municipal Council has been asked to vote 25,000 francs for the erection of a special pavilion, so as to isolate them from the other patients.

It appears, however, that [illegible] of a contagious disease and that the [illegible] run no risk of infection. The doctor in charge of the hospital, however, fears that the lepers may be attacked by tuberculosis, to which they are peculiarly subject. As cases of tuberculosis are treated in the same ward, he thinks it better to erect a special pavilion for the lepers. This decision as to the non-contagiousness of leprosy will come as a surprise to [illegible] that the disease is contagious in the highest degree. As, however, there is not the slightest ground for doubt that the bacilli of Hansen or those of the [illegible] of Dr. Alibean and his aids, the Parisians need not fear the outbreak of an epidemic of leprosy.

Dead Sea Evaporation.

Scientific observation justifies the estimate that a daily average of 6,000,000 tons of water is received into the Dead Sea from the Jordan and other tributaries during the year. During the rainy season, says the Chicago Record-Herald, the amount is very much greater; during the dry season it is, of course, very much less, but this average will be maintained year after year. There is no outlet, and the level is kept down by evaporation, which is very rapid because of the intense heat, the dry atmosphere, and the dry winds which are constantly blowing down the gorges between the mountains. This evaporation causes a heavy mist to hang over the lake at all times, and, when it is more rapid than usual, heavy clouds form and thunderstorms sometimes rage with great violence in the pocket between the cliffs, even in the dry season. A flood of rain often falls upon the surface of the sea when the sun is shining, and the atmosphere is as dry as a [illegible] half a mile from the shore. The mountains around the Dead Sea are rarely seen with distinctness because of this [illegible]

A Story of Beaudelaire.

The following story of Beaudelaire appears in the Revue de Paris:

"On one occasion, when accompanying a literary friend, who was also a publisher, in the street, Beaudelaire suddenly said: "Let us go and take a bath together." "Certainly," answered the other, not willing to appear surprised at this singular proposal. Accordingly the two found their way to one of the many bathing establishments which even now still survive in the older quarters of Paris. Scarcely had the editor settled himself down to enjoy his warm bath when he heard Beaudelaire call out: "Now then you can no longer defend yourself, dear friend, I will read you my five-act tragedy!" It should be explained that in those days the taking of a bath was, in Paris, a lengthy and important business, the longer the bather stayed in the warm water the better it was supposed to be for his health.

STATE NEWS BUREAU.

Governor Pennypacker Inaugurated.

[illegible] was inaugurated Governor of Pennsylvania, to succeed William A. [illegible] as Governor. The Governor, in his inaugural address, said: "In Pennsylvania conflicts between concentrated capital and organized labor are of frequent occurrence, and often result in [illegible] profits and earnings, violation of the law and disturbance and inconvenience to the community. Whatever tends to bring about an improvement of the condition of the masses of mankind and assists in their cultivation and elevation is an advantage to the State and ought to be encouraged by legislation. There is no corresponding gain to the State from the mere accumulation of an [illegible]. The State is, therefore, interested, within reasonable bounds, in bringing about a condition of things in which in the distribution of records resulting from business ventures, capital shall have less of profit and labor more of compensation. While it is a satisfaction to see that [illegible] in England and elsewhere [illegible] the question of the propriety of imposing a slight tax upon some one of her productions, the proceeds to be applied to the betterment of our roads."

[illegible] Irwin, who for years [illegible] forging, caused a stir in the Corners [illegible] in Connellsville, by disposing of $100 worth of property which he alleged was owned by him in Texas. Plant left Irwin some days ago on one of his periodical [illegible] and a few days ago he was [illegible] Sheppard [illegible] Mt. Pleasant. He was taken to the hospital in a critical condition and made a will disposing of his property. Hospital attendants put the sums varying from $500 to $1000 each. Then he died. After the death of the will became known [illegible] investigation. They took [illegible] that Plant had a great [illegible] of property [illegible], or elsewhere. On the bench records he is down as a tramp. By his companions he was regarded as quite a Lothario.

Few Illiterate Mill Girls.

Deputy Factory Inspector Bishop has just completed an inspection of all the silk mills in Lackawanna County. The report is an important one, as the charges made with the Coal Strike Commission was in session in Scranton, that fifty per cent. of the employes could neither read or write. Mills in Scranton, Carbondale, Olyphant, Priceburg and Dunmore were inspected. The number of employes was found to be 4239; males, 341; females, 3072; number under sixteen years of age, males, 173; females, 1414. Only seven could not read and write. Eighteen could either read and not write or write and not read. These and the seven who could do neither were suspended from employment and sent home to attend school. The number working nights was 239, of whom 177 were females, sixty-two of whom were under sixteen years of age.

Both Sat Still and Froze.

David Anthony, aged sixty years, who lived alone in a cabin near Cross Fork, was found frozen to death in his house. He was sitting on the floor upright, with eyes open. His horse, which he had driven from Cross Fork during the night, stood at the door. William O'Bryon, aged sixty-five, was found frozen to death sitting on the steps leading to the basement of a tobacco warehouse. He was stricken with paralysis at Lancaster, and sitting down, was frozen to death.

Men Arrested as Train Wreckers.

But for the timely discovery of an attempt to wreck passenger train No. 32, on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railroad, near Monessen, the passengers would have been hurled over a precipice into the Monongahela River. CHAPTER XVII.
Continued.

"What is the matter, Fan?"

"There! there! on the floor! In letters of blood—red blood!—you see a name?" cried Fan, trembling and shrinking.

"I see nothing, sax coo. suppose I dropped it," said Hammond, stooping and picking it up.

"And you, Mrs. Harker!" said Fan, fearfully agitated. "You see a name in blood?—a name"

"I see nothing, Fan," said Nancy.

"Then it is meant for me! for me!" shrieked Fan, tossing up her arms. "A name—a phantom name! a warning—another warning from the grave—Nicholas Dunn! He was my husband!"

And falling upon her face she swooned with terror.

Luke and Nancy stared at each other in mutual consternation.

The truth was out, plain and firm!

Old Fan was Ellen Elizabeth Dunn, and they were her children.

"If she would but die now," said Luke, pale and remorseless.

"'Twere well if she did," said Nancy.

But neither of them raised the miserable old creature, whose ghastly and wrinkled face rested so still upon the name of their—father!

Hammond gazed upon her in stern silence for a moment, and then turned to speak to Henry Elgin.

Henry Elgin was as before; but Kate Elgin was gone! Hammond stared thunderstruck.

"Tremble dog!" shouted Elgin. "Her delirium was feigned! God grant she may escape!" and springing from his bed with sudden strength he shut the door of the ante-chamber near the hall and locked it with the key then in the lock.

Luke, springing to a bell-cord and jerking it violently, cried: "We are outwitted again by that girl!" Then into the speaking tube he roared: "Daniel rouse the dogs! Both prisoners are loose!"

Then rushing at the locked door, he began to spring against it furiously, while he filled the room with cries of rage.

CHAPTER XVIII.

ANTHILIANY TRIUMPHS AGAIN.

Daniel was prowling about the little library, with writing materials in his hand, when the ringing of the bell over [illegible] ear to the speaking-tube.

"[illegible] that were bellowed from the white and gold chamber—'Daniel! Rouse the dogs! Both the prisoners are loose!'—caused him to dash down ink, pen and paper, and dart into the eastern wing like mad.

Something in white flitted by him and he grasped at it, gaining a handful of muslin, and a sharp blow in the face for his activity.

The blow Kate—for it was she—delivered at random, blinded him for an instant, and in the next second she was lost in the darkness.

"She will make for the front," said Daniel, "but I know how to get there before her."

He sped along the hall, down a flight of steps, taking them from top to bottom, [illegible] through another hall and into a room, damp and dark, but familiar to him. Then he lifted a trap and hurried down a steep ladder into a cellar. He knew every inch of the way, blindfolded he would have known it. Counting his steps as he sped on he reached another ladder and his foot was on the first round when a strange noise startled his ear.

"What's that?" he said pausing.

A smothered pounding far down it seemed in the earth below him.

His hair rose on end, the sweat started in big drops from every pore.

"It is the evil one working his way up after Luke Hammond or me! or me!" he shouted, and bounded up the ladder this his round bullet head butted painfully against a trap above. He raised the trap and leaped into the main house. Then sliding through a basement apartment he ascended from the kitchen to the dining room, [illegible] with fearful leaps, he [illegible] and jerked open a window.

"Tiger! Leo! catch him! Ha! Stoboy! Catch 'em, dogs!" he shrieked.

In a second the fierce bay hounds savage growls of two monstrous dogs told him that he was heard. He gazed forth for a moment seeing the [illegible] forms of the ferocious [illegible] here and there amid the darkness and then burrowed to the rear of the house.

"Fan! Rose! Ay, they are safe!" he shouted as he sped from the window and there he [illegible].

Again hoarse baying and growls and dim shadows leaping about.

"Try their teeth, my dearie girls," said Daniel, closing the window and rushing to a cupboard where he lighted a lantern.

"Now to run down the horse and he prowling about the house, grasping a bludgeon as if expecting to meet one a hero, a timid trembling hare, but a wolf or a panther.

And Kate! Poor girl, after her so far successful ruse to escape from her prison, she had fled she knew not whither till seized by Daniel in the hall. Escaping his frantic clutch she sped trying every window, her outstretched arms, every door, every wall. She stumbled over something, stooped and picked it up. It was the same hatchet her father had lately held aside the night before in the [illegible]. Its possession nerved her arm to strike, and finding a window she dashed out the glass, shattered the sash, and was out on the moonlit the shouts when she heard the wrathful shout of Daniel and the clamor of the savage dogs.

"Oh, cruel fate! What shall I do?" she cried in woeful despair, but back [illegible] stubborn wood.

Daniel, returning to the eastern wing heard the sound of crashing shutters, and bounded toward the spot, with lantern advanced in one hand and his bludgeon in the other.

"Ruffian! would you strike a woman?" cried Kate.

"Aye!" he roared, leaping forward and sweeping around his club. But his foot slipped as he sprung and he fell headlong at Kate's feet.

Grasping club and lantern he was about to rise, and a bitter curse was on his lips when Kate cried out: "May God forgive me!" and struck him full upon his bare head with the blunt of the hatchet, letting fall the weapon as she struck. He groaned, fell forward upon his face and lay fearfully still.

Kate stared at him for a moment as if appalled at her act, and then snatching up the lantern fled along the hall, hoping to find some entrance into the main house, and thence to effect an escape or alarm. But all the doors were barred and nailed up. Again she traversed the deserted halls and found herself in Hammond's library. Here the door leading into the main house was locked and the key gone. While she searched for something with which to shatter the bolt she heard a crash and yell in the eastern wing.

Luke had broken his way out of the ante-room by furious springs against the door! Kate's despairing eye fell upon the strong, heavy steel poker near the grate. She seized it and showered rapid blows upon the lock. It bent, it yielded, the door flew open wide, and Kate darted away just as Luke sprang through the closet passage into the library.

"Stop!" he yelled. But Kate fled on, and was descending the main staircase when her foot tripped on a loose stair rod and she fell headlong to the bottom, sorely bruised and half stunned. As she struggled to rise the sinewy arms of Luke encircled her shrinking limbs!

"Caught again!" he laughed, as he tore off his cravat and bound her wrists.

Kate rose to her feet, half dead with fear and exhaustion, but made no further effort to escape.

"Ha! What device will you next attempt?" said Hammond, as he picked up the lantern lying near her and led her to his library.

"Whatever God shall give me wit and strength to do, monster," was her undaunted reply.

"You are cunning—very cunning," said Luke, retaining his grasp upon her with one hand and searching in a drawer with the other.

"I am sorry to do it, Catharine Elgin," said he, as he produced a pair of handcuffs, "but my safety demands that you shall wear a pair of iron bracelets for a few hours."

Kate made no struggle as he slipped the handcuffs over her tender wrists and snapped them fast with a tiny key.

As the degradation was completed Daniel made his appearance with a bloody crown and an inflamed visage.

"Good," said he as he saw the handcuffs. "That should have been done yesterday. She is as tricky as a cat. Luck was with me, for if it had been the edge, and not the blunt, of the hatchet that struck me I'm blowed if there hadn't been a murder!"

"It is not murder to kill brutes who assail us," said Kate.

"Small difference to me what name you'd a given it, Miss," said Daniel, grinning. "I wouldn't have struck yer. I only meant to scare yer, Miss."

"No matter," said Hammond. "Daniel, go place Elgin on his bed, and roll back into the crimson chamber. When I crashed my way out, I found him lying senseless in the hall. He had fainted."

Daniel hurried on his errand, and Hammond led poor Kate back to her prison, where she found Daniel rolling away the bed. "My poor, dear father!" said Kate, sobbing for the first time.

Henry Elgin opened his eyes at the sound of her voice and as he saw her he said:

"Take heart, my child. God is just and merciful—I will prove!"

"Away with him," said Hammond, and then led Kate to her bar.

Nancy had in the meantime erased the table, she had written on the floor, bidding old Fan as she to do it, and when Fan came to her to see the first glance was toward the spot. The name was [illegible].

"It is gone!" said Fan, "but I know I saw it!" and at that instant Hammond led Kate Elgin over the bar.

Yes Fan, [illegible] a name for she had overheard every word that had passed between Hammond and Nancy while she knelt downstairs.

But as Kate began to speak the name of Hammond sprang up in Fan and scoring her by the shoulders swung her heading forth [illegible]

"Away! to you bed, old [illegible] hag! But for you this [illegible] happened!"

Fan gathered herself slowly and [illegible] away, while Luke remained to Kate.

"Monster!" said Kate. "She is your mother!"

"I care [illegible] All my life I will [illegible] Luke!"

"[illegible]" repeated Kate in a scream that made Hammond [illegible] every word true and your sister [illegible] Nicholas Dunn. Your father's name was N[illegible] Dunn, and I think the great God of heaven [illegible] you are not my [illegible]

"You know too much for your own good, Catharine Elgin," said he sternly. "I am not your uncle. I know [illegible] as I am not your uncle, I [illegible] your husband."

With a terrible threat, more terrible to Kate Elgin than all he had ever [illegible] he strode away.

"What on me! what can that man mean?" exclaimed Kate.

"I'll tell you what he means, Miss," said Nancy, with a triumphant leer of fiendish malice. "Luke Hammond has a son, but that son may refuse to marry you, and then Luke will marry you himself."

"Oh, I die ten thousand deaths rather," groaned Kate.

"But you may wish and want," sneered Nancy, "but Luke always has his way in the end. Your pride will be all shame if you resist much longer."

"Such villainy is dreadful to imagine—terrible to know," said Kate, astonished at the calmness of the evil woman near her.

"Yes, you were proud, Catharine Elgin," said Nancy, "and your eyes flashed, your lips curled—when I used to speak to you. But, let me tell you—my blood is as rich as yours."

"Blood!" said Kate, scornfully. "In this country blood is as rich and red in the poor man's veins as in the millionaire's. [illegible] you are not of us by birth or birth. Nor was it pride that made me despise you, Nancy Harker, but hate of the evil I saw encompassing you as a garment. You are well [illegible] to be Luke Hammond's sister—Luke Hammond, indeed! He has no right to the name! He is an imposter! And be sure that time will discover his villainy and yours, wretched woman!"

"Don't taunt me, Catharine Elgin! You may revile Luke, but you shan't revile Nancy Harker! I'll tear your proud eyes out of your head for you, you [illegible]," screamed Nancy, opening and shutting her long, lean fingers and distorting her evil face with rage.

"I [illegible] believe you would, Nancy Harker," said Kate, quietly, and snarling [illegible] sister, what better could you be than a she wolf?"

Nancy swelled with venom, and would have rejoiced to dig her sharp nails in that beautiful and scornful face, but the bell near the door tinkled and she [illegible] to the speaking tube.

"It is dead [illegible], you had better try to sleep," were the words that came to her ear.

Nancy replied:

"I will tell Daniel to bring a bed into the ante-room and I will sleep there."

"How is the prisoner?" asked Luke, in his den above.

"Safe as [illegible]," said Nancy.

"Be [illegible] she is [illegible]," said the tube. [illegible] Nancy left the room to seek Daniel, but did not fail to lock the door after her.

When she returned Kate was asleep in the chair, for fatigue and excitement had overpowered her.

"You are handsome—handsome as a May morning," thought Nancy, gazing upon the unfortunate, brave-hearted girl, "and was once as handsome as you—and you'll fade—ha! fade before Luke [illegible] you."

Then shaking her fist at the sleeping girl she locked the door and lay down upon the bed Daniel had brought into the apartment.

In the crimson chamber Henry Elgin once more slept.

In [illegible]

In a den near the kitchen old Fan shivered and moaned, dreaming of the dead.

Far down among the foundations of the house James Greene labored and hoped, and in the little library sat Luke Hammond in his chair, with his cocked pistols on the table before him.

CHAPTER XIX.

HAMMOND ABOVE, GREENE BELOW.

At [illegible] o'clock on the night following the events of the last chapter Hammond was seated in his library, wondering where the lost will could be, and [illegible] that he would in the end be found to fire the house to destroy it, when Nancy entered from the eastern wing.

"[illegible] how goes all in our jails?"

He laughed as he spoke, for he thought it a droll conceit, and rubbed his [illegible] briskly as if in excellent spirits.

"Much better with the prisoners than with the turnkeys," said Nancy sitting down. "Daniel is nearly worn out, he says he cannot sleep for fear one of the prisoners may escape, and we make him a goldwing bird. And—for me I wish the thing were over. Luke—Catharine Elgin shows no sign of yielding."

"She will yield! The lover's [illegible]. And how is Fan?"

"She sits in the kitchen moaning and muttering."

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS

Artistic Screens.

Artistic screens, and this phrase refers to an extensive array of beautiful productions, with quadruple and triple panels, are ever in demand. The useful and the merely ornamental types included in this season's collection are among the best and the handsomest that have yet been designed and the palm for beauty must be given to those with hand-painted panels and mounted in gilt or "old ivory" effect.

Cleaning Old Lace.

Old lace may be cleaned effectually by fastening the pieces on a linen covered smooth board and wetting with a clean sponge dipped in warm water. The lace must not be rubbed under any circumstances. After the first wetting dab thoroughly with warm water in which fine soap has been dissolved in the proportion of half an ounce to a quart of water. When thoroughly clean rinse by dabbling with clear water. Dry as well as possible with the sponge and leave the operation to be completed by time.

Bedroom Sachets.

To give the bedroom a sweet, delicate odor, after it has been thoroughly aired, is the mission of the butterfly sachet. This is the latest novelty to come from skilful feminine fingers, and is fashioned from gay-colored tissue-paper in the form of a real butterfly as it is possible to contrive them, and then filled with a fragrant powder. They are hung on the window curtain or dressing table, as though the beautiful creature had just flitted in and linked there with the sole purpose of giving a dainty perfume to the room.

For the Rose Bowl.

Two disks of wire netting with a top rim and three legs of stouter wire for insertion in the rose bowl can be fashioned by any wireworker or iron monger or even by the ingenious amateur. The diameter of the disk should be not more than an inch from the bottom of the bowl. It will hold the rose stems securely and offer a much more satisfactory effect than when the blossoms are allowed to tilt as the pleases. As a temporary expedient stiff wire like fox or [illegible] in the bowl out of sight, makes a good foundation.

A Family Treasure.

Every family treasure box contains a few daguerreotypes, and if these are of direct family interest they are as valuable as oil paintings or miniatures. The difficulty is to display them interestingly. Unless they are viewed in exactly the right light and at the proper angle they are almost invisible. They should never be taken out of the odd little box frames, as they are extremely perishable. Remove the velvet lined cover and frame the portraits in broad flat frames of dull gold. Still better, frame them as if they were miniatures in narrow gold frames, and put them in a deep, glass-covered shadow box. Study carefully the best light in which to place them, and hang them near the mantel or beside a flat case. They are too indefinite to appear to advantage near other pictures.—New York Post.

RECIPES

Squash Biscuit—One cup of strained yellow squash, one cup of milk, one tablespoon of butter, one tablespoon of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, half a yeast cake and flour to make a soft dough; let rise overnight, roll out biscuit; put on a greased pan, let rise again two hours and bake in a quick oven twenty minutes.

Scotch Short Bread—Put in a bowl two cupfuls of flour; rub in it half a cupful of butter; add one-quarter cupful sugar and a pinch of salt; add cold water to make a stiff dough; turn on a floured board, roll out half an inch thick; cut in squares and pinch the edges with the fingers; wet the top of each with water and dust with sugar; sprinkle over each a few caraway seeds and bake in ungreased tins in a slow oven, dredging them a second time with sugar just before taking from the oven.

Prune Pudding—One pint of milk, three eggs, half a cupful of sugar, two shredded wheat biscuits, one-fourth teaspoonful of cinnamon, one tablespoonful of sugar and one cupful of cooked chopped prunes. Beat the eggs, salt, cinnamon and sugar together, add the milk, mix well and pour over the biscuit crumbs and the chopped prunes; turn into a buttered baking dish, put on a few bits of butter over the top, set in a moderate oven and bake slowly and firm in the centre; serve with plain sauce.

Rice Jelly—Wash two cupfuls of rice in several waters; then boil half an hour in plenty of boiling salted water; [illegible] a stove pare twelve tart apples, take out the cores, fill the cavities with sugar and cinnamon, then cover the apples with a thick coating of rice dumplings in a separate piece of cloth; boil and put them in a pot of cold water, bring the water quickly to a boil and boil fifty minutes; remove each cloth and turn the dumplings on a large platter, serve with hard or cream sauce. If only a few dumplings are wanted, use one cup of rice for six apples, or half a cup of rice for three apples.

Lobster Salad—Cut up and season the lobster and for every one quart of the lobster there should be used four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two of oil, one teaspoonful of salt and one-half a teaspoonful of pepper. Break the leaves from a head of lettuce, one by one, and wash them singly in a pan of cold water. Put them in ice for ten minutes, and then in a wire basket to shake them free from water. When ready to serve place two or three leaves together in the form of a shell and arrange these on a flat dish, mix the lobster, and put a tablespoonful of the mixture in each cluster of the leaves then add a teaspoonful of dressing to each spoonful of lobster.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease, and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." MRS. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

WANT LONDON LEAGUES.

Some curious glimpses into the life of old London are afforded by the reports made to the Charity Commission on the endowed charities in the County of London, a few of which have just been issued as parliamentary papers. For instance, in the reports dealing with the city parishes, we have an estimate of the value set on sermons by city men in olden times. That estimate varied from 5 shillings to £1 10s. One Thomas Brightwell left a bequest for a sermon to be preached on the 5th of November every time it fell on a Sunday, the minister to get 13s. 4d., the clerk 3s. 4d., and the sexton 1s. 4d. But David Gittin had a more modest idea of the value of a sermon in the same parish. He required two sermons for 10 shillings, one to be preached on the second Sunday in Advent, and the other on the second Sunday in Lent. The reader got 2 shillings, the churchwarden 2s. 8d., and the poor sexton 4 pence for each occasion. John Ireland thought 13s. 4d. enough for two sermons.

In 1660 John [illegible] left a curious bequest to the parish of St. Bennet, Paul's Wharf. A pound was set apart for an annual sermon, the text to be taken from the 5th chapter of St. John and the 27th verse. He also left enough to buy twelve penny loaves for twelve poor members of the parish who attended a sermon every Friday in the parish church. But he expected [illegible] sermon, for before or after the sermon the minister had to spend an hour examining or instructing the poor people in the Christian doctrine.

The most generous donor of the preacher was James Wood, who thought a sermon in St. Nicholas-Cole-Abbey was worth £1 10s. every alternate year. In 1625 he bequeathed to the Company of Bowyers a sum to enable them, among other things, to repair to the parish church named, after they had sworn in their wardens and master every second year, there to hear a sermon and pay the parson £1 10s., and the clerk and sexton 1s. 6d. each. In the parish of St. Michael Bassishaw one Edward Herlin in the eighteenth century left money, the interest of which was to be applied to purchasing two sixpenny loaves each Sunday for two poor men or women who should attend divine service.—London Daily News.

Her Blessings.

When a lady comes to count her blessings she can generally find plenty to be thankful for, particularly if she may happen to be a widow. She may be regarded by other people as altogether joyous.

"I'm thinking about the wonderful progress the world has made. It's much we've got to be thankful for," said Mrs. Matthews, rocking in her old stuffed chair, with a pair of knitting needles in her hands and a placid smile.

"It is wonderful," admitted her niece.

"Seems as if everything turned to good. There's lightning, now. If it hadn't been for that I never should have had those fine rods on the house and barn that make me feel so safe in a thunderstorm. And there's smallpox: if it hadn't been for that we never should have known the blessings of vaccination; and if there hadn't been nearsighted folks nobody would have thought to invent magnifying glasses and specs. I declare there's a sight of things to be thankful for."—Youth's Companion.

Time Tables as Geographies.

"I never realized the value of time tables until I got hold of a class of boys old enough to take an interest in geography," said a New York public school teacher. "So far as the study of maps goes I can get better results from the use of time tables than from all the geographies in the market. Maps that have been prepared for the purpose of cultivating the youthful mind in the matter of locality are scanned as fugitives by all but the studious few. But just set a dozen or so around a pile of time tables and tell them to locate cities, lakes and rivers, and they will work like beavers and come out letter perfect every time. For most children time tables are as engrossing maps as a source of unfailing interest both in and out of school hours. It is true that this methodical method may give the boys exceptional chances to pick up a number of certain railroads, but I am sure to get enough geography out of them to get a fair conception of it."—New York Times.

A Kitchener Story.

In the current number of Blackwood's the following characteristic anecdote is told of Lord Kitchener: Once a general officer was inspecting a post on the line of communications, and [illegible] at a little hut which [illegible] represented the headquarters of the majesty of the army in some windswept hole. Enter X, and, looking round, espies an office table and two trays, one full of papers. Interested, he reads the label attached to each. The empty one was ticketed "Business," and the other "Bosh." "Excellent officer," purrs X—"thoroughly understands his work and Kitchener's methods." But when he went further and proceeded to examine the papers in the "Bosh" tray his feelings may be better imagined than described on finding that the documents consisted exclusively of his own voluminous orders and memoranda.

THE GREATEST THING OF ALL.

That she has golden hair divine
To me is no great shakes,
But I bow down before the fine
Plump waffles that she makes.

Her classic features that I see
My thirst for beauty slakes;
Yet not so much are they to me
As are the cakes she bakes.

I love her eyes, whose limpid blue
Rivals Norwegian lakes;
Yet I forget them—so would you—
When browsing on her steaks.

Girls, if you're pretty, nothing more,
You are but arrant fakes,
A husband's love flies out the door
Whene'er his stomach aches.

Wouldn't Work Overtime.

An extraordinary story of an elephant employed in a timber yard is told in Animal Life. A number of logs had to be moved by him and only one remained when the call came for ceasing work. Of course the elephant knew the call had sounded and was sauntering away when the foreman bade him move the last log. He did not obey it, but, with all his strength, he simply did not manage to lift it. So angry was the foreman called up a second elephant to help, but even the two together did no good, the log could not be stirred. It must be left. Next day to the foreman's astonishment, when the bell rang for beginning work the first elephant marched straight on to the log, lifted it quickly and carried it to its proper place.

The English at Caracas.

An English landing party has found its way to Caracas before now, says the Westminster Gazette. Sir Francis Drake was there on a buccaneering expedition after the dispersion of the Spanish Armada. The high road was strongly fortified against him, but a traitor guided him by an Indian path through the ravines. He found only one man in the city, a knight named Alonzo de Lodema, who was too old to go out with his neighbors, but offered to fight the Englishmen one at a time as long as his strength lasted. Sir Francis was so pleased with his valor that he proposed to spare his life, but the old gentleman got into a private quarrel with one of the sailors, and the sailor cut his head off. Sir Francis did not lose a single man and carried off treasure to the value of £200,000.

Dr. Lorenz's Modest Greatness.

At one of his first clinics in New York City Dr. Lorenz remarked apologetically:

"I am sorry that this has to be done in so much haste. If I had the time I should like to give up two hours to this operation. But you know everything is rush in New York."

On Friday, at a clinic in the operating room of the Bellevue Medical College before an audience of fully 400 persons, the famous Austrian surgeon showed that he can cash set the world even in this city of haste, by removing a double hip dislocation in one minute and twenty-five seconds. This was done not to illustrate the speed with which in certain cases the bloodless surgery may be performed, but simply in the course of professional business.

To illustrate the difference between the old method and the new, Dr. Lorenz remarked that he had performed 260 similar operations by cutting, but had abandoned that system three years ago, and since that time has performed upward of 1000 operations by his present method. When, as in the case mentioned, the brief space of time required for an operation that restores to a child the natural use of its limbs is considered, it is not strange that the skilful surgeon is regarded as almost a wonder worker, and that praise and thanks enough to turn the head of an ordinary man are showered upon him.

Dr. Lorenz deserves the praise which is now his in generous measure all the more because of the modesty of its recipient and his freedom from petty ambition. What leads him to study to his patients as well as the benefits of his skill and method.—New York World.

What the Eyes Say.

Upturned eyes are typical of devotion.

Wide-open eyes are indicative of [illegible].

Side-glancing eyes are always to be distrusted.

Brown eyes are said by oculists to be the strongest.

Small eyes are commonly supposed to indicate cunning.

The downcast eye has in all ages been typical of modesty.

The proper distance between the eyes is the width of one eye.

People of melancholic temperament rarely have blue eyes.

Eyes of long, sharp corners indicate great discernment and penetration.

The white of the eye showing beneath the iris is indicative of cool deliberation.

Gray eyes turning green in anger or excitement are indicative of a choleric temperament.

An eye the upper lid of which passes horizontally across the pupil indicates mental ability.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. If it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble: too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often [illegible] and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

—A well pleased audience witnessed the performance of "The Burglar" at the Auditorium on Monday evening. The company is composed of some excellent people.

—Mrs. J. F. Spencer, of Mansfield, is visiting at the home of her parents, Superintendent and Mrs. John F. Pitts, on the county farm. Mrs. Spencer expects to move next week to Morris, where her husband will reside.

—Fitz & Webster's Company, which is booked at the Auditorium for next Wednesday evening, visited this place [illegible] glass show. Many novel and pleasing specialties were introduced.

—Miss Lulu Scheidweiler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Scheidweiler, of Corning, former residents of this borough, was married last evening to John F. Rowe, of that city. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride.

—Bache Hose Company has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Foreman, E. P. Rees; First Assistant, Fred Emberger; Second Assistant, William Smith; Third Assistant, Lafayette English; Secretary, Grant Kelsey; Treasurer, H. H. Button.

—A very handsome mail wagon, such as used on the rural free delivery routes, was on exhibition near the postoffice last Saturday and attracted considerable attention. It will be used by H. D. Tator on the new route from Middlebury through Farmington. The wagon was secured through Messrs. Navle & Westbrook, of this borough.

—A new orchestra of eleven pieces furnished the music for "The Burglar" at the Auditorium on Monday evening. It is composed of the following: N. E. Brundage, first violin; J. B. Kerwin and Herman Jackson, second violins; W. S. Woodhouse, first cornet; J. C. Briggs, second cornet; P. E. Fullwood, clarinet; H. C. Young, flute; W. P. Smith, trombone; G. E. Merritt, bass viol; Robert Cunningham, drums; Harold Leib, piano.

Mr. Roy Reappointed Postmaster.

Arthur M. Roy, editor of the Agitator, who has so satisfactorily filled the position of Postmaster at Wellsboro for the past four years, was reappointed last week and his name was sent to the Senate on Friday for confirmation.

Mr. Roy had no opposition, being the only applicant, which is sufficient evidence of his excellent service to the public as a Government official and his popularity with all classes and factions. With his able assistants, Deputy Postmaster W. B. Sullivan, Mailing Clerk J. H. Gartland and Stamp Clerk Miss Jennie King, there are but few, if any, better conducted or better equipped postoffices in the Keystone State.

We doff our hat to Postmaster Roy and extend our congratulations.

Smothered in Mother's Arms.

A deplorable event occurred last Saturday while Mr. and Mrs. Perley Phelps and her mother, Mrs. Nobles, were driving from their home in Delmar to this borough. Mrs. Phelps carried her infant child, about two months, in her arms and brought the little one here for the purpose of having a [illegible] operated upon.

The child was closely wrapped as a protection from the cold. When the party arrived at the Hotel Wilcox the mother unwrapped her babe in the sitting room and was horrified to discover that it was dead, having been smothered.

It was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Phelps and the mother was nearly heartbroken over the sad event.

DEATH OF JAMES E. FISH.

Passed Away Yesterday Morning After an Illness of Several Years.

James E. Fish died at his home on Water street yesterday morning at about 3 o'clock after a prolonged illness, having been an invalid for eleven years. He had been in a critical condition for some time and his death was not unexpected. He was in the 59th year of his age.

Mr. Fish was born at Mainesburg, September 9, 1848, and had spent a good portion of his life in Wellsboro, coming here in 1870, when his father, the late E. A. Fish, was elected Sheriff of this county. He was associated with his father in the Sheriff's office and later was employed as clerk at the Parkhurst House (now Coles Hotel) for several years.

In 1883 Mr. Fish leased the hotel at Antrim, which he successfully conducted for four years. He then returned to Wellsboro and purchased the shoe store of N. F. Marvin. He was obliged to give up this business about two years later on account of poor health, superinduced by an attack of the grip. He was also affected with a serious nervous trouble, followed by a complication of diseases which left him a helpless invalid.

James Fish was a genial, whole-souled fellow and had many warm friends in this place and other sections of the county. During his residence here he took an active interest in various business enterprises and was always ready to contribute his share towards the advancement and prosperity of the town in which he lived.

Mr. Fish was married about twenty years ago to Miss Sarah Brewster, of this borough, who survives him together with one daughter, Eva. During his long and painful illness Mrs. Fish has been faithfully devoted to her husband in caring for him and ministering to his wants.

The funeral will be held from the house to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. A. C. Shaw will conduct the service.

The Borough Council.

At the regular meeting of the Borough Council on Monday evening President Longwell and Councilmen Bailey, Rogers and Blatchley were present.

Bills for $39.25, including the premium of $30 on the borough [illegible] torium, were paid.

Collector T. T. Rees was present and paid in $203.96 on tax duplicate of 1901, and $506.92 on the 1902 duplicate.

Complaints had been made by the residents in the suburbs on account of the walks not being cleaned during the snow storm of Sunday. It seems that the Street Commissioner stopped the work before that portion of the town had been reached.

President Longwell was instructed to notify Mr. Yahn to clean all the walks in the future, regardless of the orders of the Street Commissioner.

The Clerk was authorized to settle the duplicates of 1901 and 1902 with Collector Rees.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

Death of Mrs. Wm. Downer.

Mrs. William Downer, wife of Street Commissioner Downer, died last Sunday afternoon at her home on Grant street, of paralysis. She had been ill for about a year, but had been able to be up and about the house until a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Downer was born in Dublin, Ireland, and was 62 years of age. In 1858 she was married to William Downer in Philadelphia. Eight children were born to them, of whom seven survive, as follows: Charles, of Portland, Oregon; William, of Kansas City, Mo.; Walter, of Wellsboro; Mrs. William Moyer, of Norristown, Montgomery county, and Mrs. John Ostrander, Mrs. Lafayette English and Stella Downer, all of this borough.

The deceased was greatly devoted to her home and family. She was charitable and kind and well liked as a neighbor and friend. Funeral services were held from St. Paul's Episcopal church yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. William Heakes officiating.

Most Complete Sawmill.

Fred Burnett, of Galeton, a former resident of this borough, who has been in the employ of the Wellsboro Lumber Company at Tiadaghton, writes to the Coudersport Journal as follows about the new sawmill at the former place:

The Wellsboro Lumber Company at Tiadaghton have one of the most complete sawmills of its size in the State. It is a single band mill, with a capacity of fifty thousand every ten hours. The system and management of this mill far surpasses the Goodyear mills. Everything is like clockwork; there are no jars or breaks. Each man knows what he has to do and he does it, and there is no fault-finding or dissatisfaction. Great pains are taken to make good lumber, and it is not so much the quantity as the quality of lumber that the Wellsboro Lumber Company want.

Fleitz May Be Retained.

A Harrisburg dispatch says: "The appointment of a Deputy Attorney General has not been settled as yet, but it is said that the present deputy, Fred M. Fleitz, who was chairman of the Lackawanna Republican County Committee and president of the Republican State League of Clubs, may retain the position contingent upon his taking up his residence in Harrisburg."

THE BAND'S GREAT FAIR

Now in Full Blast and Largely Attended Every Evening.

SOME OF THE ATTRACTIONS

Many Pretty Booths Filled With Pretty Ladies, Who Offer Handsome Wares for Sale—Long List of Big Prizes—Concert Programme and Other Amusements.

The Band Fair and Festival opened on Monday with a big dinner, heralded at 11:30 by the band discoursing enlivening music. Armory Hall is the scene of this festivity and is beautiful in its decorations and dainty booths.

As you enter the reception room you notice a mysterious looking tent draped in the national colors. Here on the several nights of the fair crystal balls will forecast most astonishing facts—one night with tea grounds, another with cards, and Thursday and Friday nights a palmist will read your palm [illegible] accurately for a nominal sum. So you are in a "Fair" way to know everything the future may hold in store for you before you enter the hall proper.

The booths in general are decorated very effectively with evergreens and red bunting and red paper roses made by the ladies of the several committees.

The Japanese Booth, [illegible] of the hall, is in charge of Mrs. C. L. Babcock, assisted by Mrs. Harold Roy, Mrs. S. F. Doumaux and Misses Coneverly and Madden.

Next in order is the Variety Booth, where Mrs. A. A. Truman, Miss Truman, Mrs. Bernkopf, Mrs. L. B. Finklestein, Mrs. D. R. Vandorn and Mrs. E. L. Warriner offer for sale anything from a [illegible] book to a derby hat.

The Lemonade Booth is decorated in red and green, with beautiful clusters of white chrysanthemums. Here Mrs. E. E. Hyer, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Gardner, Miss Bernkopf and Anna Hyer, serve most excellent lemonade, together with other soft drinks. The "Ping Pong Punch" is greatly sought after by the older people as well as the youngsters who frequent this enticing spot.

The Candy Booth is a place where all the sweets are sold by Mrs. A. H. Dartt, assisted by Mrs. F. M. Bodine, Mrs. H. J. Wilcox, Mrs. Chas. Bodine, Mrs. A. [illegible] and Miss Blanche Wheeler and Louise VanValkenburg.

The large booth in the center of the hall is the most interesting of all. Underneath its dashing decorations of red with white chrysanthemums preside two charming ladies with silver hair, showing to advantage the handsome gifts which are being disposed of. Mrs. Raesly and Mrs. Davis, assisted by Miss Susan Jones, are the caretakers of these valuables.

The Bakery, which is the only booth on the right of the hall, is very enticing to the housekeepers in particular. Under the excellent management of Mrs. W. H. Roberts great results are expected. Mrs. W. W. Tate, Mrs. F. H. Rose, Mrs. C. H. Roberts and Mrs. A. B. Dunsmore assist in dispensing the delicacies.

Quick lunches are served at the lunch counters by a bevy of pretty girls, assisted by young gentlemen.

The dinner on Monday attracted a large crowd, over 200 people being served. The Band boys officiated as waiters and gave excellent service. About 125 people partook of the supper. Both meals were excellent, for which the following ladies are entitled to great credit: Mrs. Frank Conovery, Mrs. R. G. Austin, Mrs. M. G. Austin, Mrs. Geo. W. Williams, Mrs. [illegible] E. B. Young, Mrs. C. W. Webb and Mrs. A. M. Roy.

On Tuesday evening the Mandolin Club rendered a select programme, which was well received by a large and appreciative crowd.

Last evening a concert programme was rendered by the following local talent: Katherine Borden, Rose Blair, Lizzie Jackson, Marcia Bell, Lynette Field, Luva Bailey, Louise Mitchell, Lida Bailey, and May Blair McCloskey. Both vocal and instrumental selections did great credit to the musical accomplishments of the several ladies.

The [illegible] Messrs. Campbell & Field, the Crafton street music dealers, will give a Pianola recital, which promises to be a rare musical treat.

The attendance last evening was the largest of the week, over 500 people being in the hall.

The Republican Ticket.

At the Republican caucuses held in this borough last Saturday evening the following ticket was nominated:

Burgess—Dr. J. P. Longwell.
Collector—O. B. Roberts.
Auditor—W. R. Borden.

FIRST WARD.

Councilmen—J. J. Rogers, Grant Kelsey.
School Directors—J. W. Mather, Ray S. Houghton.
Judge of Election—Stacey Shaw.
Inspector—B. E. Francis.

SECOND WARD.

Councilman—A. T. Dartt.
School Director—Francis M. Sheller.
Judge of Election—E. P. Rees.
Inspector—Edward Sullivan.

Will It Strike Wellsboro?

Speaking of the construction of the railroad from Towanda to Canton, which has long been looked forward to, the Towanda Review has the following to say:

"[illegible] reliable source that the construction of the road will be commenced next summer, or as soon as the present Ralston extension of the S. and N. Y. is completed. This work will be finished by the first of May, and is now being [illegible] with all speed. The most remarkable supposition is, that if this connection is made from Towanda, by way of Canton with the Goodyear's road, the building of the line from Towanda to Binghamton will follow in the course of a comparatively short time."

CUT GLASS WORKS.

Last Friday evening the Business Men's Association held a meeting at the office of Justice O. H. Davis, to discuss the question of establishing a cut glass factory in this borough. Messrs. F. J. Eygabroat and W. H. Ryon, of the Lawrenceville cut glass works, were present and gave some practical ideas and information concerning the contemplated project.

There was a good attendance of the business men, who appeared favorably impressed with the benefits to be derived from such a plant as proposed. While the visitors made no formal proposition it was strongly intimated that if a site and a building for the factory was provided by the citizens, the same as had been done at Lawrenceville, the question would be favorably considered.

The Executive Committe of the Association, consisting of Chas. H. Roberts, Geo. M. Spalding, M. H. Stebbins, W. A. Bannigan, F. W. Graves and Carl Bernkopf, were instructed to consider and entertain any proposition that the Lawrenceville gentlemen saw fit to offer.

The old Board of Trade, which was organized in Wellsboro several years ago, received several propositions of more or less importance to the citizens during the period of its existence, but for lack of proper support its efforts were fruitless and every project dropped.

Every citizen of Wellsboro knows fully well that the town is sadly in need of one or more substantial industries of some sort. The present Business Men's Association is composed of a class of active, determined, enterprising citizens and their efforts will doubtless culminate in securing some permanent enterprise in the near future.

Since the above was put in type we have it from a reliable and authentic source that the preliminary arrangements for establishing a tank glass factory in this place have been completed; that $20,000 has already been subscribed by local capitalists; that $20,000 more has been put up by experienced glass workers; that the plant will give employment to over 200 hands, and will bring about fifty families to this borough.

POWERFUL EXPLOSIVE.

Wonders of Hathamite, the Lastest Discovery of Wellsboro's Inventor.

"The most powerful explosive known is hathamite, a recently discovered substance which showed remarkable qualities under recent tests. Besides having the maximum of explosive power this strange material, which is the discovery of G. M. Hathaway of Wellsboro, Pa., is the most difficult to explode," says the New York World.

"To test it on this point the following seemingly dangerous experiments were tried without effect: Lighted matches were throw into it. It was pounded to powder on a sledge. Shells were exploded near it. Rifle balls were fired into it. Light percussion caps were discharged in it.

"To explode the material a heavy percussion cap must be used, but then it detonates with terrific force. Some of the tests of its explosive force were:

"A small charge of the mixture was exploded upon a sheet of quarter inch boiler plate. It cut a hole in the steel as cleanly as a machine could do it.

"A small charge was exploded between two cakes of ice, each weighing over 150 pounds. All that remained was a small pile of actual snow—not finely crushed ice.

"In a second test on quarter inch steel in the open air the plate was placed on a collar of steel. The steel was cut clean over the collar. The collar, of four inches diameter and three inches long, was broken into several pieces.

"About an ounce of hathamite was exploded in a regulation United States government one pound steel, and a thorough fragmentation of the shell occurred."

Row Over Mansfield Postoffice.

The appointment of Thomas H. Bailey for Postmaster at Mansfield, which was made last Wednesday, has caused a "hot time in the old town," and the friends of the defeated candidates swear all sorts of vengeance. The Advertiser has joined the ranks of the "knockers," and in speaking of the appointment says: "It indicates a usurpation or rather abuse of power on the part of Congressman Deemer that is exasperating. It says, in substance, that 'I and my political friends at Wellsboro know best, and you, the people of Mansfield, must accept whom we say, not your own choice, for postmaster for the next four years.'"

It is reported here that the appointment has been "held up" in Washington, pending the consideration of the vigorous protests, petitions, etc., of the kicksters. Let the band play.

The "Gazette" Takes the Lead.

Rev. H. M. Wolf, Jr., of Waterford, Conn., a former pastor of the First Baptist church of this borough, in remitting for the GAZETTE, says: "I consider the GAZETTE as being in the lead of the papers of the county, and always enjoy [illegible]."

We might add to the above that Mr. Wolf knows what constitutes a good local paper, as one time having been engaged in the newspaper business, and was the founder of the Williamsport Grit.

Changes in Mail Routes.

[illegible] carrier for the new delivery route out of the Tioga postoffice next Monday. The route goes out the Cowanesque Creek road and around through Farmington township, covering a distance of 21 miles. There are 103 houses on the route, with a population of 463.

On Saturday the mail route from Niles Valley by the way of Crosscut to East Charleston was discontinued and in its place established the rural delivery route via Catlin Hollow.

THE SCALES OF JUSTICE

Proceedings of the First Week of the January Term of Court.

BUT FEW CRIMINAL CASES

Grand Jury Soon Disposed of Business Before Them and Were Discharged on Tuesday—Gaines Robbers Sentenced to the Penitentiary.

The regular January term of court convened on Monday afternoon with Judge Niles on the bench. There was not a very large attendance at the opening of court, there being but little business of special interest to the public.

After appointing R. W. Bailey foreman of the grand jury Judge Niles charged the jury, dwelling principally upon the question of keeping their deliberations secret.

In the case of Sarah J. Dulso against Joseph Dulso, suit for alimony, ex-Judge Cameron made a motion that $100 in addition to the amount of $75, already awarded, be given the plaintiff in order to pay the expense of preparation of the case. The additional amount was granted.

Constant Brewer, of Westfield, was brought before the Court and plead guilty to the charge of stealing $28 from R. H. Sands, who was boarding at Alonzo Seamans while building a bridge across the Cowanesque river. Sands and Brewer occupied the same room and on the morning the money was stolen Sands left his pocketbook under his pillow and when he returned for it a few minutes later the money was missing. Brewer was sentenced to the Huntingdon Reformatory.

The first case called for trial was the Commonwealth against Floyd Reese, fornication and bastardy. This case comes from Morris Run. Only three witnesses were sworn and the case went to the jury at 5:30, and Reese was found guilty.

In the Commonwealth cases against William Christian and Jesse Christian, against whom two indictments were found for burglary and larceny, defendants pleaded guilty and were sentenced to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern penitentary at Philadelphia for and during the period of three years and eight months, pay a fine of $500, to restore the stolen goods or pay costs of prosecution.

Herbert and Harriet Miller and Carrie Barber, charged with receiving stolen goods, were allowed to depart from Court by each entering into a recognizance in the sum of $1,000 to appear at the next term of court, with the understanding that if, in the meantime, their conduct be good no further prosecution would be had against them. The people are very poor and infirm and [illegible] were not guilty of [illegible] with receiving the goods stolen by the Christians from the Sabinsville depot.

There was an unusually small amount of criminal business before the grand jury, the following being returned true bills:

Con. Brewer, larceny.
Floyd Reese, fornication and bastardy.
William and Jesse Christian, larceny.
William and Jesse Christian, burglary and larceny.
Herbert and Harriet Miller and Carrie Barber, receiving stolen goods; two bills.
Ed. Banfield, cruelty to animals.
William and Yump Sweet, burglary and larceny.
James Moran, larceny as bailee.

[illegible] the county poorhouse and after filing the following report were discharged:

To the Honorable Judge of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Tioga county:

The grand jury for the January term of court respectfully report to you that it has thoroughly inspected the county house and its appurtenant buildings and find them in good and tidy condition, with but slight repairs to the floors, plumbing and to the kitchen range required. The inmates appeared to be well cared for and satisfied.

The Sheriff's house and jail are in good condition. The only repairs immediately needed are slight attention to water closets in cells.

R. W. BAILEY,
Foreman.

The case of the Commonwealth against Edward Banfield was taken up on Tuesday afternoon. The case comes from Morris, and Banfield is charged with having beaten a horse belonging to H. E. Thomas until the animal died. Three teams were hauling coal from the Mitchell mine to the cars at Morris, and from the evidence it appears that one of the horses got stuck in a mud hole, and in the attempt to haul it out one of the horses was killed. The defendant was charged with having struck the animal several times on the head, thus causing its death. The defense showed that the injury was done by other parties than the defendant.

Friday morning the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty and the county to pay one-half the costs and the defendant one-half. As this return is not legal the jury was sent out again and returned a verdict of not guilty, defendant to pay the costs; but the Court refused to sentence the defendant to pay [illegible].

Yesterday morning when the case of the Commonwealth against Charles Dorrance, assault and battery, was called for trial, N. H. Ryon, attorney for the defendant, made a motion to quash so much of the indictment as relates to battery, on the ground that battery was not in the offence charged. The motion was sustained.

—Frank Putnam is in jail at Galeton, while his wife hovers between life and death from a blow he gave her. While intoxicated one night last week, according to her story, he first struck her on the head with a stick and then threw her down stairs, where neighbors found her in a pool of blood.

COUNTY AFFAIRS.

A summary of events in Tioga county for the week.

—More houses to rent are wanted at Tioga.

—The premiums which were offered with the GAZETTE for the past three months are withdrawn with this issue. Our combination offers with the World and Cosmopolitan Magazine, announced elsewhere, still holds good. The People's Weekly will be sent free of charge to subscribers who pay $1.50 per year, cash in advance.

—Mrs. Jane Knapp, one of the oldest and best known residents of Nelson, died at the home of her nephew, Charles Hewitt, in Bradford county, last Wednesday. The funeral was held from the Presbyterian church in Nelson last Friday afternoon, Rev. Charles Weeks, of Osceola, conducting the service, assisted by Rev. L. A. Davis and Henry Goodrich.

—To-morrow will be the last day for filing certificates of nomination with the County Commissioners for the election of township officers, [illegible] February 17th. The [illegible] be [illegible] at the office of the County Commissioners.

—Mrs. Mary Ann Roberts, one of the pioneers of Clymer, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. [illegible], on Monday morning, aged about 85 years. Deceased was born and reared in Connecticut and came to this county by ox team and was married to Jeremiah Roberts, who died many years ago. Mrs. Roberts was the mother of [illegible] Roberts, of Wellsboro, and is survived by seven other children.

—The Tioga Agitator says: "Mrs. May Avery, who has been for the past year or more in different families about town, was a week or two ago taken to the county poorhouse. This was done only not necessary on account of her being alone, all direction, but also for the purpose of [illegible] the care and attention she needs in her declining years, and which is not to be found in every household."

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The following [illegible] nounced as candidates for the offices specified below, subject to the decision of the Republican voters of Tioga county at the primary election:

FOR SHERIFF,
MILON L. KLOCK, Wellsboro.

FOR CORONER,
JOHN P. LONGWELL, Wellsboro.

THE owners of the anthracite mines in Great Britian have formed a combine under the name of Anthracite Trust.

THE State Senate [illegible] tion appropriating $300,000 to the St. Louis Exposition, and providing for a commission to take charge of the Pennsylvania exhibit.

[illegible] ful railroad wreck [illegible] particulars of which will be found on the eighth page. The injured number at least forty. Of these many will die.

WHILE the people are suffering from a lack of coal now it is gratifying to know that the ice crop will be large next summer and will be of exceptionally good quality. Unfortunately it won't heat the furnace now.

THE legal department of the federal government has asked for an appropriation of $500,000 to pay the expenses of prosecuting the trusts. Unless more sincerity and energy is evinced by the present administration in that direction, it [illegible] waste of money to appropriate even one dollar under the pretense of being used to prosecute the predatory trusts.

ONE of the big beef packing houses in Chicago last year did a business that exceeded $200,000,000. It made a net profit of 13 per cent. on its capital stock of $25,000,000. It will thus be seen that the higher prices which the consumer was called upon to pay in 1902 was not entirely because of the higher price of feed or stock, as alleged at the time.

THE duties of the Secretary of the Commonwealth are not especially engrossing, but he is the best compensated of the officers of the State. His salary of $6,600 a year is not extravagant, though it may be regarded as adequate. His actual compensation, mainly in fees, is about five times the fixed salary. The retiring Secretary, Mr. Griest, according to Harrisburg report, has received altogether $113,000 in his four years term.

A COMMISSION appointed by Judge Gordon, of Clearfield, to inquire into [illegible] County Commissioners of Clearfield [illegible] county buildings has just reported. It finds that the charges are true; that the [illegible] much as private parties were paying for the same kind of work, and it is recommended that the ex-Commissioners be charged with the difference.

REPRESENTATIVE W. E. CHAMPAIGN, of this county, has introduced a bill in the House providing that District Attorneys in counties whose population does not exceed 150,000 shall be paid a salary in lieu of fees; creating the office of Assistant District Attorney in counties having a population of 150,000. Mr. Champaign has also introduced a bill asking for an appropriation of $12,000 for Lawrenceville, $10,000 for Tioga, and $3,000 each for Covington and Mansfield, for dyking and improving the streams in said boroughs.

A SOLDIER'S MONUMENT.

Democratic State Chairman Creasy has introduced a bill in the Legislature offering to appropriate $[illegible] for the erection of a monument on Capitol Hill in the memory of the Pennsylvania soldiers and sailors who participated in the War of the Rebellion, from [illegible] 1865. Mr. Creasy's measure provides for the appointment of a commission of five citizens of Pennsylvania by the Governor to supervise the selection and erection of the monument.

Though nearly thirty-eight years have elapsed since the close of the Civil War, Pennsylvania has no monument to the soldiers of the Rebellion at the capital. After the termination of the Mexican War the Legislature hastened to place a column on the hill to the memory of the Pennsylvanians who fell in that conflict. Mr. Creasy thought that, while a bill was being rushed through this Legislature to erect a monument to Simon Cameron, and while an effort was being made to join with Virginia to place a [illegible] ert E. Lee, this would be a good time to agitate for a monument to the soldiers and sailors who fell in the War of the Rebellion.

—David Anthony, of Cross Fork, who was found frozen to death in his cabin [illegible] week Tuesday morning, particulars of which were printed in the last issue of the GAZETTE, was a former well-known resident of Elkland. He was 52 years of age and is survived by a son and four [illegible]

ON WASHINGTON LETTER.

Germany Should be Called Upon to Deal with Republican Filibusters.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. The Germans has gone too far in her treatment of Venezuela and should be called upon to halt, is the conviction of one of the leading men in Congress. Senator Bacon, [illegible] said: "I do not believe Germany was justified in this bombardment (of San Carlos). It is possible that the German naval officer may have exceeded his instructions but I doubt if his Government will disavow his action if this is true. The harsh attitude of Germany is open to very severe criticism, but at the same time it is probably prudent not to stir up any bad feeling by harsh expressions of opinion. If Germany wants to blockade the port she may be justified with the consent of the United States, but a bombardment is not part of a blockade." Senator Elkins said: "The situation looks alarming to me for the time. Germany, this country begins to believe, is not acting fairly or openly." Senator McLaurin of Mississippi said: "If I had my way I would drive Germany and England out of Venezuela. After that the matter might be settled by arbitration. I do not believe that Germany ought to be allowed to take the brutal course she is taking solely because Venezuela is the weak power."

At the State Department it is said that the United States will not at present take any cognizance of Germany's action. It is further admitted that President Roosevelt has, by his definition of the Monroe Doctrine, placed this country in a most unfortunate position. Relying on that definition, any [illegible] can intimidate and bully any South American republic [illegible] it does not land troops and attempt the acquisition of territory the United States cannot logically protest, at least cannot do so without repudiating the Roosevelt definition of the Monroe Doctrine. Minister Bowen is in Washington and is doing all in his power to bring about a peaceful settlement of the difficulty, but is meeting with grave obstacles which are giving rise to serious suspicions as to the honesty of Germany's purpose.

That set of men known as the leaders of the Republican party is perpetrating in the United States Senate one of the most outrageous filibusters in parliamentary history. After a test vote by which [illegible] publican Senators and practically all of the Democrats, constituting [illegible] of the Senate, desire to vote on the Statehood bill and vote affirmatively, the Senate leaders, Aldrich, Hanna, Spooner, Allison, Lodge, Hale, et. al., have announced that they will not permit the question to come to a vote if their determination necessitates the calling of an extra session to make appropriations for the regular expenses of the Government. They are openly defying the will of the majority and are setting themselves up as oracles whose will the Senate must obey.

Among the reasons which are doubtless prompting the continuance of the [illegible] blockade by the Republican ring may be cited a desire to prevent anti-trust legislation which will prove inimical to the interests which [illegible] placed these men in the Senate and the hope of preventing the passage of the Immigration bill and other legislation in the interest of the whole people.

With a view to further complicating the anti-trust situation the members of the Senate are now preparing a number of anti-trust bills which it is well understood are intended to head off the administration measure just reported to the House and likely to pass with the [illegible] of Democratic votes at an early [illegible] it gets to the Senate, however, it will be met with the argument that one clause has been covered in the Elkins bill, another in some other and so on, and it is the hope of the Republican leaders to in this way prevent all effective anti-trust legislation, even supposing their fight on the Statehood bill [illegible] not prove sufficient to do so.

The Secretary of State has finally concluded terms with Colombia and has sent to the Senate a treaty which seems to meet with general approval. Under the conditions of the convention this country is to lease the required zone of land for one hundred years, with the privilege of renewal at the same rental, at pleasure. The annual rental, which is to begin five years after the ratification of the treaty, is to be $250,000, and the cash payment to be made as soon as the convention is ratified by both Congresses will be $10,000,000. This, with the $40,000,000 which it is proposed to pay the Panama Canal Company, will make an immediate cash payment of $50,000,000. At the end of sixty years the entire property of the Panama Railway will revert to the United States. All tonnage and other water dues from the harbors of the Panama to Colon will be paid directly to the United States. During the construction of the Canal martial law will prevail and United States troops will police the district. After that arrangements are to be made for policing, etc., by a joint high commission, but it is provided that in no instance will a citizen of the United States be tried by other than a court maintained by his own Government.

The Cuban treaty is still the executive business before the Senate and Senator Cullom is watching for an opportunity to secure an executive session of several hours duration when it is believed the convention will be promptly ratified. [illegible] pressed to your correspondent their approval of the Columbian treaty and its ratification is practically assured as soon as the Cuban treaty is disposed of.

The Philippine committee has amended the House bill by lowering the duty on Philippine imports so that it now provides that 50 per cent. of the Dingley rates shall be collected on Philippine sugar, tobacco and all other Philippine products shall be admitted to this country duty free. As sugar and tobacco constitute almost the entire exportable [illegible] of the islands, however, the [illegible] is a concession of 25 per cent. [illegible] at the expense of the Philippines.

SALARY VERSUS FEES.

Representative Champaign Introduces An Important Bill in the House.

Representative Champaign, of Tioga county, has introduced a bill in the House that, if it should become law, would affect almost every county in the State. Whether its provisions would benefit the counties would only be [illegible] several years. The measure provides that District Attorneys in counties having less than 150,000 population shall be paid a salary instead of fees, the salaries to range from $300 a year in counties with less than 10,000 population to $3,000 a year in counties whose population does not exceed 150,000. As an [illegible] ratio the District Attorney of Lycoming county would receive a salary of about $1,900 a year. In connection with the salary bill, Mr. Champaign has presented a bill providing for the appointment of an Assistant District Attorney in the same counties that would be affected by the salary law.

The charge has frequently been made that the office of District Attorney has been farmed and that the incumbents thereof have followed the practice of making hay while the sun shines. The [illegible] features and there has been a long standing demand that county officials shall be paid a stipulated salary in order to put a stop to the manner in which some District Attorneys have used their positions to enrich themselves. Whether [illegible] 150,000 population—would be able to induce competent attorneys to accept the district attorneyship at the salary provided for in the Champaign bill, is a question that time alone would solve.

GIRL POISONED PARENTS.

Told Her Playmates That Was the Way to Get Money.

Nellie Kinsley, 13 years old, of Corning, has confessed that a mysterious illness from which her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac B. Kinsley, have been suffering is due to poison. She said she [illegible] into [illegible] to obtain their property after death.

"Do you know how to get money and houses and everything you want?" she asked her playmates when her parents became ill. "When your father and mother are dead all they own will belong to you. I found that out a little while ago, and I took some of the poison papa got to kill the rats with and put it in the supper I cooked. I didn't eat the supper, but papa and mamma did, and they got sick. If they die I will have money."

Later, when charged with making the confession, Nellie denied it. She was taken to the Susquehanna Home at Binghamton and has there repeated the story of the poisoning.

From the Corning Leader it is learned that "Nellie was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Kinsley when she was two years old, and has grown up into a pretty, well-mannered girl of more than ordinary intelligence. She has been carefully educated and is an excellent musician. Her own parentage is not known.

"Recently Mr. Kinsley bought some arsenic and put it on a shelf in the pantry. Soon afterward Nellie prepared supper for her parents and they were taken violently ill. When they had begun to recover Nellie made some toast, [illegible] they ate, and again they became [illegible] ill.

"Since Nellie's departure it is said she had acted strangely of late. She was away all night and next morning was found sitting on a neighbor's piazza. She refused to explain her conduct. A gold watch and some money are missing from Nellie's home, but she denies taking them."

ANTRIM AFFAIRS.

Local Events and Happenings in Our Neighboring Mining Town.

ANTRIM, Jan. 28.—Misses Helen Pollock and Anna Keating spent Sunday in Mansfield with the former's sister, Miss Christine Pollock, who is attending the Normal at that place.

Miss Mary Reeder returned to Rochester last week.

A party of our young people attended the entertainment at Morris given by Fred High.

Sleighing parties are quite the vogue. Besides a goodly number of young folks, a party of jolly married ladies enjoyed a trip to Wellsboro last Saturday and were very pleasantly entertained at Hotel Wilcox.

John and Charles Mack, formerly of Corning, sons of Dan Mack, of this place, are working here.

Miss Isabelle Marvin, one of our teachers, spent Sunday at her home in Covington.

Miss Helen Blair spent a few days in Wellsboro as the guest of Miss Jessie Moran.

About a dozen of our young people took a sleigh ride to Wellsboro last Monday evening and attended "The Burglar," given in the Auditorium.

Paralytic Cured by Lightning.

The Blossburg Advertiser is responsible for the following remarkable story of a living example of nature's treatment:

R. D. Washburn, wife and two children, are visiting relatives and friends in Mansfield and Blossburg. Some twelve or fourteen years ago Mr. Washburn resided in Blossburg and was a paralytic cripple, unable to walk without crutches. He is a painter by trade. While painting the church at Arnot he was struck by lightning, which, instead of killing him, cured him of his paralysis, and he immediately commenced walking without his crutches. Few would voluntarily want to take such heroic medicine as Mr. Washburn took and run the chances of a cure.

PREPARING TO REBUILD.

Work on New Block at Lawrenceville to Be Commenced at Once.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Jan. 28.—The work of clearing out the brick and stone from the cellars of the Rusling block will be completed this week. Building will be commenced at once, if the weather permits.

Jos. Oakden, of Corning, visited friends here Friday.

[illegible] business last week.

Mrs. Harry Vosburg and son, Merle, were in Elmira Saturday.

CHURCH DEDICATED.

A Handsome Edifice Dedicated Free of Debt at Farmington Center.

FARMINGTON CENTER, Jan. 28.—The new Gospel Mission church which was dedicated on Sunday, the 18th inst., is a very neat and handsome edifice and a credit to its congregation. Better still, the church is free from debt and the contributions for the work were entirely voluntarily.

There was a very large attendance at the dedicatory services, many people being present from neighboring places—among the number being several large sleigh loads from Elkland. Rev. Clark, assisted by several visiting clergymen, conducted the services, which were continued throughout the day. The members of the congregation have given occasion to feel elated over their new church.

Ira H. Mourey is employed in enlarging and improving his sugar bush. He has ordered 200 new buckets and will build a new sugar house.

A. E. Rice is attending court this week as a juror. Mr. Rice expects to move to Osceola next April, having made a deal for the old Kimball farm.

There promises to be an unusually large number of changes among the farm tenants the coming spring. Several families in this locality will go West and all of their personal property will be sold.

Uncle Luther Carpenter is in a critical condition and there are no hopes of his recovery.

CROOKED CREEK CHAT.

Successful Donation Visit—Death of a Former Resident—Personal.

CROOKED CREEK, Jan. 28.—The donation at the parsonage for the benefit of the pastor, Rev. Hollands, on Friday evening, was largely attended and enjoyed by all. The proceeds were $31.65.

Teams are busy drawing coal from the mines.

News was received here yesterday announcing the death of James Hardenburgh, of Elmira, formerly of this place.

Charles McClure, of Wassa, Mich., is visiting friends in this place after twenty-six years absence.

Florence Gleason, of Marsh Creek, visited at Grant Dickinson's over Sunday.

Mrs. Mattie Goodrich, of Lawrenceville, is visiting her grandfather, Ira Briggs.

W. H. Long and wife, of Osceola, are visiting at the home of A. J. Dickinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Nell West are rejoicing over the arrival of a boy baby.

Mrs. Hugh Kerwin, of Wellsboro, was called here last week on account of the sickness of her mother, Mrs. A. J. Dickinson.

A Strange Case.

Stuart L. Hollister, of Hornellsville, N. Y., and Miss Belle F. Nash, of Canton, were married on Saturday evening at the First Presbyterian church at Canton, Rev. W. H. Crooks, of Mansfield, officiating.

Mr. Hollister and Miss Nash were to have been married next June, but recently a strange development, furnishing a study for phychologists, hastened matters.

Each evening at 7 o'clock, while thinking of Miss Nash, Mr. Hollister fell under a hypnotic spell, from which he was aroused with difficulty. Finally he was taken to his home in Painted Post. Physicians advised that Miss Nash be sent for, which was done. The hypnotic spells ceased. It was then decided that the marriage should take place as soon as arrangements could be made.

Accidentally Shot Himself.

Last Friday afternoon while Ellery Luther, a young man who lives below Stokesdale Junction, was engaged in cleaning a revolver the weapon was discharged and the bullet lodged in the leg below the knee. Drs. Niles and Longwell both attempted to locate the ball but without success. On Saturday morning the young man went to Corning for an X-ray examination. The bullet was found so thoroughly imbedded in the knee that the physicians did not deem it advisable to probe for it.

SUDDENLY SUMMONED.

George M. Hall, of Farmington, Succumbs to Heart Trouble.

George M. Hall, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Farmington, died very suddenly at his home in that township last week Tuesday evening, of neuralgia of the heart. He was in the 75th year of his age.

His death was a great shock to his many friends throughout the county. Since he moved to this borough Mr. Hall had made frequent visits to Wellsboro, and only last week Sunday he spent the day with his daughter here. He was apparently in the best of health until Tuesday, when he complained of sharp pains in his chest. In the afternoon the pains became more frequent and severe and he was compelled to take to his bed, passing away about 7 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Hall was born in Hancock, Mass., May 5, 1828, and had been a resident of Farmington for over fifty years. He was a prosperous and successful farmer and had acquired a valuable property. Socially he was a pleasant gentleman and was liked by all who knew him. He was a good Christian and a good citizen and his death is a great loss to the community in which he lived.

Besides his wife the deceased is survived by four children, as follows: Frances, wife of Eugene Colegrove, of Farmington; Hattie, wife of John Leslie, of Elbridge and Mrs. Frank VanDusen, of Wellsboro.

The funeral was held on Friday afternoon from the Presbyterian church at Farmington Hill, and the services were attended by a very large crowd of sympathetic friends and relatives.

Old Maids and Climate.

By Lillian Bell.

AN unmarried woman, of course, is always a disappointment to someone, but the way she takes it is the difference between old maids and bachelor girls.

The unenlightened frequently make the mistake of thinking that lack of opportunity is responsible for the existence of single women, but I lay most of it to climate. The New England climate is not conducive to matrimony or even love-making. And even after the crucial moment has passed and the single woman has drifted from girlhood to spinsterhood, a cold climate, raw winds, chill rains, and snow tend to increase the loneliness of it.

There may be old maids in the South, but I never heard of their being called by that name. I have known some single women, schoolteachers, anywhere from seventeen to fifty, and some of their grown boy pupils were eternally and perennially in love with them. A single woman who has made up her mind not to marry has a hard time to keep her resolution in the South, for she is always assailed to break it. The very climate breathes love. Ah, there it is! As I said, old maids are surely a matter of climate.—Harper's Bazar.

The Place of the Feeble Minded

By Dr. Louise Fiske Bryson.

ONE of the problems of the twentieth century is to find out the place of the feebleminded. That they should be educated is the opinion of those fitted to judge in the matter. While it is impossible to eradicate a weakness which is theirs by heredity, nearly all sub-normal children can be educated to a surprising degree, and their usefulness and happiness increased to a wonderful extent. One has only to visit an institution where they are trained rationally to realize this fact. The feebleminded claim, therefore, the same privelege that belongs to every child in this republic, which is cheerfully granted to other defectives. No one challenges the right of the blind to an education which will fit them for a sphere of usefulness. Justice demands the same care and consideration for mentally deficient children, equally helpless and equally blameless for their misfortune.

All there is of power, all there is of religion, of statecraft, science must inevitably take part sooner or later in the immediate care and training of the sub-normal child. Cheering is the thought that the future holds forth highest hope concerning the redemption of the "least of these." Even now the spirit of religion is beginning to be harnessed to the work of the world, and tasks hitherto disregarded acquire dignity and moment.

Instil a Sentiment For Bird Protection

By Casper Whitney.

I HAVE said that, in sections where the birds have been destroyed, the loss to agriculture has increased. It is estimated on absolutely reliable authority that a loss of $400,000,000 is sustained annually by cultivators of the soil in North America through insect ravages. Therefore, the question becomes, not is it desirable to protect the birds, but how effectually they may be protected.

In this, as in all other similar efforts, the most difficult obstacle in the way is lack of popular sympathy. And this is withheld, I feel sure, more through ignorance than through viciousness; that is why these educational [illegible] started by the [illegible] out to the average man and woman just what bird protection signifies, not from a sentimental, but from the common-sense view of protecting material interests.

The place to begin education on this subject is in the homes and the schools. If parents will take the trouble to explain to their boys just how valuable these little birds are to the prosperity of the country, there will be a tremendous and important cessation of the killing that now goes on in the pulpits of every country town and village.

The small boy with his new gun is among the most persistent destroyers of small birds, and of course the boy has no conception of what he is doing. A [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] is [illegible] and means a development of sentiment which will require no legal restraint to prevent killing our birds of song and birds of plumage.

[illegible] is the [illegible] Women throughout the land grow maudlin over all kinds of charities, and funds for the benefit of the foreign unenlightened and unclothed; they weepfully discuss tabbie's demise, unhonored and unsung, through too persistent back fence exploration, but they continue to encourage the most pernicious trade on earth by wearing on their hats the remains of our birds of song and of plumage which the milliner's agents have slaughtered.

Mr. William T. Hornaday, who is an authority on the subject and a devoted laborer in its cause, says: "that milliners' hunters have practically exterminated birds known as plume birds, in this country, and have stripped our Atlantic Coast, the whole of Florida and the Gulf Coasts of egrets, terns and hundreds of thousands of other birds acceptable to milliners for hat trimmings. The hunters are now at work along the coasts of Mexico, Central America, Lower California and even at the head of the waters of the Orinoco and Amazon Rivers."

The Audubon Society and sportsmen have done and are doing great work in making laws to check the progress of the milliners' butcher; yet, while great good has [illegible] the root of the [illegible] can be [illegible] women [illegible] decline to buy headgear which is ornamented with bird plumage.—Outing.

The Charity of Millionaires.

By John A. Hobson.

WHEN years ago Carnegie preached his gospel of wealth—that it was his duty to regard it as a trust to be administered for public good—he caused us to think. The poor heard this gospel gladly; stranger still, even some of the rich. Society not merely commends the gifts of the rich; it applauds them. In what way can the wants of the great mass of the people be so well supplied?

Is there no loss of independence in this? I challenge any one to deny that these methods of getting money for public purposes do not awake in the receiver at any rate that sentiment of patronage which is the mortal enemy of independence in an individual or in a city. I was brought up in a town which depended for its best public improvements upon a rich brewer. Michael Thomas Bass was a generous, kind-hearted, open-handed man, without personal pride or a perceptible feeling of patronage, but I know well the slavish position of the civic mind, the reluctance of the municipal authorities to put their hands into the public purse even for the most worthy objects, the calculating schemes to extract new benefits in the way of parks, schools, or hospitals from the great benefactor. Those who know some men as Mr. Carnegie, Personal Edwards, and others cannot doubt the honesty of their motives, but such personal regard must not divert us from the greater questions. Is society to be saved by millionaires?

The first danger connected with the millionaires' charity is, I think, that it operates to divert attention into the causes of great wealth. The good easy, popular assumption is that a man has made his money. Most millionaires are men who have more than the usual hardness of character. They may even have rendered to the public services which in a perfect world would be rewards for the measure of public service they render is not always equal to the injury they do to society. It is not always easy to trace the sources of great wealth. It is sometimes accomplished by the increment of land values, by combinations to secure control of the market, that they expand by rebates and discriminations, tariff manipulations, I blush to tell, by specialties in corporations.

Those engaged in private charities know the dangers of promoting gifts. What about the public? Does the charity lay on justice? Great municipal expenditures for the benefit of the people is this. What can the millionaire best serve by his gifts? Surely for the millionaire supply needs which he in his capacity of citizen works with the public purse cannot do. These might perhaps include the alleviation of personal suffering.

Without proper discrimination the charity of millionaires is proving dangerous. What is most needed for social enlightenment is a flood of free daylight upon the arts of human knowledge related to the most vital issues of reform. Is the millionaire likely to supply them in his gifts toward higher education? Will he employ his money in putting down the brain power which he sits? It is not the dead land but the living interests that need the world for education for the masses. Let us remember that charity is not justice.

Puritan Pies.

When the young girl could prepare the crust of a pumpkin pie of such a consistency that it would be tender and flaky, just thick enough to hold the semi-fluid mass and fluted evenly so as to present an attractive appearance, she was held to have begun to be a skilled cook, writes Ellen H. Richards in Good Housekeeping. This "crinkling" of the pie crust was a very important point. The esthetic instinct so strongly developed by the common use of found a certain satisfaction in the cookery of the dames, once they were released from the harder pioneer work, so that the innate love of ornament came out on these various pies. Those made of cranberry were decorated with slender strips of crust forming various geometric figures. Children expected to find birds' nests with the watching bird on their special individual mince pies which they carried home from grandmother's.

The average woman doesn't feel comfortable unless her shoes hurt her.

THE LENGTH OF THE DAY.

Is Not Constant Through Periods of Geological Ages.

Professor R. S. Woodward, the director of the Carnegie Institution, has made a mathematical investigation of the effects of the contraction of the earth through cooling, on the one hand, and the increase of its bulk from the accumulation of meteoric dust, on the other hand, have had or may have hereafter in changing the length of the day. The former of these two causes tends to accelerate the earth's rotation on its axis and thus to shorten the day, while the latter cause must have a contrary effect. The conclusion at which he arrives is that so slowly does the effect of cooling accumulate that the day will not change—or has not changed, as the case may be—by so much as a half-second in the first ten million years after the earth began to solidify. Still, the shortening of the day which must come with the end of the process of cooling is a very sensible fraction of its present length. Assuming that the earth had originally a temperature of 3000 degrees centigrade, it follows, according to his calculations, that the day will ultimately be shortened by about six per cent. of its initial length, or by an hour and a half yearly. The length of time required by the earth to cool down to the temperature of surrounding space must be measured by millions of years. Thus, Woodward shows that it will require about 30,000 million years for the earth to accomplish ninety-five per cent. of its contraction, and that after a million million years its contraction will no longer sensibly affect the length of the day. During no interval so short as 2000 years in the entire history of this cooling process can the length of the day have diminished by so much as the thousandth of a second from the cause in question.

This slow shortening of the day is offset by the effect of the accession of meteoric dust; yet, so slowly does this dust accumulate, notwithstanding the fact that fully 20,000,000 meteors fall daily, that its effect will not become perceptible until the total effect from cooling is nearly complete. In round numbers the latter effect goes on two hundred thousand times as fast as the effect from meteoric dust. If, therefore, the regularity of the earth as a timekeeper during historic times is to be called in question other causes must be looked for than the two which are here considered.

A Little Comforter.

In City Hall Park there was seen an exquisite illustration of the proverbial kindness of the poor to the poor. Hard by the railings facing the municipal capitol stood a tiny boy vender of chocolate [illegible] were displayed in a wooden box suspended from his neck. Round the corner came rushing a prosperous looking, portly individual, whose flapping overcoat tipped up the park merchant's frail contrivance and scattered its contents all around. Bursting into a heart broken wail the little fellow slid to the ground, too discouraged to attempt a rescue of his stock in trade, while the cause of the desolation hurried on, unheeding.

At the opposite corner there was a mite of a girl selling newspapers. Running [illegible] boy [illegible] watch her bundle, and soon the dispersed gay [illegible] were replaced in their box. Then, pulling the little fellow to his feet, straightening his cap with a roughness that was a caress, she patted him a motherly fashion, saying the while "Don't you cry, you'll forget it in a minute." There was more than an untutored girl's solace in the words; they were rich in the philosophy that comes out of the "mouths of babes."—New York Press.

The Origin of Toys.

Everybody knows that a toy is a thing with which the children play, but everybody does not know that toys have a long, long history, and that nearly every one, from the jumping-jack to the Christmas tree, has a very honorable ancestry. One day all these playthings were taken just as seriously as the tools and weapons and other appurtenances of man. Nay, they were often his most cherished possessions; they were symbols of his religious aspirations, factors in his worship, sometimes the very images of the gods themselves. Little by little their old uses have been forgotten, but no doubt they are just as useful and just as honorable nowadays, since they serve to keep the youngsters out of mischief and to give them healthful enjoyment.—Woman's Home Companion.

Played Out.

That "played out"—"done up" feeling makes life miserable for every sufferer from Kidney ills, backaches, headaches and urinary troubles, painful and annoying.

Doan's Kidney Pills

bring new life and activity, remove the pain and cure the cause, from common backache to dangerous dropsies.

Mr. E. R. Rutter, [illegible] 420 South Duke street, bookkeeper at W. H. Hoffman's cigar factory, York, Pa., says: "Backache became so frequent that I was finding anything to cure it or even to relieve it I could not do a day's work without suffering. While trying any medicine after another my attention was attracted by an account of Doan's Kidney Pills in the papers, and of course they in turn were given a trial. I procured them at Hodnett's drug store. Before I had taken a box of them I had no backache. I could work at the desk as steadily as I liked and did not even get tired in the back."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

An Arctic Meal.

Dogs were unhitched and fastened, as usual, and then each of the Eskimos climbed over the ice-foot with his snow knife and disappeared behind the [illegible] my dogs, got out their ration of pemmican, cut it up, and fed them, standing by with whip in hand to see that there was no bullying, and that each dog got his share. Then I unpacked the cooker, oil can and kitchen box, passing them up the ice-foot as high as I could reach. I did not wait for the completion of the igloo to commence my preparations for supper, but with a few strokes of the spade excavated a niche in the snowbank, put the cooker in out of the wind, filled the lamp with oil and the boiler with ice, placed a few [illegible] it for still better shelter, and lighted up. By the time the igloo was completed I had enough water melted for our tea, and supper was entirely ready by the time my men had fed the dogs; and they lost no time in freeing their clothing from snow and joining me in the igloo. Still less time was consumed in putting away the tea and biscuit and pemmican, and less again in falling off to dreamless slumber.—Commander Robert E. Peary, in Outing.

A Dead Rabbit.

When B. was only two and a half and D. was four years old, they were out in overalls one day shovelling snow. I was shovelling not far away, and suddenly I heard them shouting and calling excitedly for me to come and see the kitty-cat. Going over to investigate, I [illegible] sitting in the snow in an angle of the wall of the house, stone dead.

It took some time to explain to them that a rabbit was not a cat, for they had never seen a rabbit.

Then I had to explain, as well as I could, what death was, for they had never looked on death. The life-like pose of the rabbit made it all the harder for them to understand. I don't believe that the little fellows did understand, but their faces were grave. Suddenly the color brightened. It was evident a moment later that they had been thinking of the story of the resurrection, which he had from his mother, and of my assurance that when the snow melted the grass would grow green.

"Papa," said he, "when the snow's gone, when the trees are all green, and there's grass and flowers, and no cold, will the rabbit get alive again?"—Cy Warman, in Lippincott's Magazine.

Anecdotes of Dr. Temple.

Water of the Dead Sea.

A recent analysis of the water of the Dead Sea shows that there is over twenty-four per cent. of solid matter in it. The greater part of this consists of nine per cent. of chloride of magnesium. Next in quantity comes common salt, and then chlorides of lime, potash, iron and aluminum in decreasing amounts, with traces also of salts of ammonium, silica, sulphur, etc. After a person bathes in the water his body becomes instantly covered with a thin layer of these salts. The water is extremely irritating to the eyes.

In Paris the art of blackmail has been carried to a high stage of refinement by the use of the carrier pigeon. With my plan there are simply no risks. You send the bird in a basket to your client with a little note to this effect: 'If within twenty-four hours you do not set the pigeon at liberty after having fastened under its wing ten 1000-franc notes you will catch it.'" This is pleasantly called robbery on the wing.

Shot Through the Heart and Lives.

Cures by suture of wounds of the heart are becoming more and more common, says the London Lancet. Hitherto, however, all the cases reported have been of wounds caused by knife or sword, but M. Launay, a young surgeon attached to the Paris hospitals, has just related to the Academy of Medicine the details of a case in which the heart was pierced through by a revolver bullet. During the operation the bullet was found lying in the pericardial cavity. There were two wounds of the ventricle, one on the anterior surface and the other on the posterior surface. These were sutured with catgut. The pericardium was then sutured in its turn and the flap of the thoracic wall employed and the patient recovered without a single bad symptom.

Twelve Times Married.

Zerad Pomeroy, of Middlefield, Conn., has just, at the age of eighty-nine, married his twelfth wife. He began his matrimonial career in 1833, when he was twenty years old. In the early part of his career he not only married frequently, but rapidly. He had only been a husband a year when No. 1 died, and in a few months he married again, and when that wife died at sea his eye was speedily attracted to another, and a third marriage soon followed. In New York, where he settled for a time, he had six spouses, four of whom died, one disappeared, and one he divorced. His last wife is the grand-daughter of Mr. Pomeroy's first wife.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Dr. Temple's impatience of bores and [illegible] sometimes [illegible] nents to wince. One of the clergy of his diocese, who had pestered him a great deal, wrote an inordinately long letter describing a picture which he proposed to put up in the chancel of the church, and asked permission to do so. By the time His Grace reached the end of the epistle his patience was quite exhausted, and he replied on a postcard: "Dear Blank—Hang the picture."

A PASTOR WHO WAS BEFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PERUNA

REV. H. STUBENVOLL

Rev. H. Stubenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stubenvoll is the possessor of two Bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the Bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUBENVOLL.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

A New Carnegie Story.

A new and interesting story is being told of Andrew Carnegie. He was walking along a country road not far from Skibo Castle when he came across an old cottager busily engaged in putting a thatch roof on his cottage. He asked the man why he did not put on a tiled roof and was told that it was too expensive.

"How much?" he curtly asked.

"Fifty pounds," the man replied, and to his intense amazement and joy Mr. Carnegie there and then wrote him out a check for that amount. Going indoors, he told his wife the news.

"Mon," she said scornfully, "why dinna ye say £75? Go an' tell him ye made a mistake."

The cottager journeyed up to the castle and was shown into Mr. Carnegie's study. He explained that he had been wrong about the cost, saying it would be £25 more. The millionaire philanthropist asked for the check back, coolly tore it to pieces, and the [illegible] was promptly shown the door.—London Tit-Bits.

Food Value of the Pie.

"Seasoning, savoriness, is the essential element in this New England favorite, and in studying the position of pie in the colonial diet, it must be borne in mind that beer and wine to wash the food down was not permitted in Puritan households and that the monotonous diet of plain corn and wheat bread and salted meat needed something to brighten it, and that something the housewife found in the evolution of pie. She was also wise in securing high food value. Pastry for two pies, according to the cook book, is made by [illegible] to eight ounces of flour. This gives a food value of 2900 calories, or of itself enough for a day's ration. One nine-inch home-made mince pie is quoted at 3882 calories; one-quarter of this with the invariable accompaniment of cheese would make a good meal.—Good Housekeeping.

London's Homeless.

In no city of the world is there such hopeless misery as in London; such [illegible] are made toward the regeneration of this class, efforts which, although they may not be for the purpose of raising these unfortunates from their distressing condition, at least are for the purpose of permitting them to subsist and eke out their miserable livelihood.—Paris Le Monde Illustre.

Mr. Carnegie's "Chirpiness."

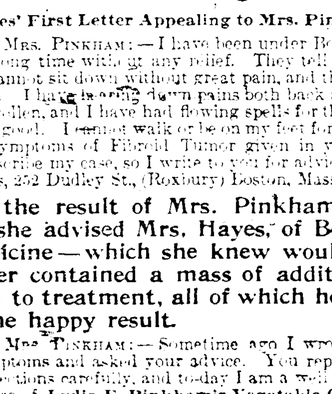
Mr. Stead has a paper in the Young Man on Mr. Carnegie, whom he describes as "one of the pleasantest, jolliest and most good-natured of mortals:"

He is in his sixty-sixth year, and he is as keen as if he were a lad of seventeen in all simple, healthy and natural amusements. He has kept his youth extraordinarily well. There is a robust boyishness about him which is very remarkable for a person of his years. The possession of the enormous fortune, which he accumulated in the course of a lifetime at the rate of about a million a year, does not weigh him down in the least. "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown" does not apply to this uncrowned modern king of the modern world. He is as chirpy as a cock-sparrow and seems to feel the weight of his responsibilities no more than if he were a bird.

"That," adds Mr. Stead, "is the man as I know him. There may be, probably there is, another side, but I have never come across it."

The Wings of a Bird.

It was my good fortune once to be invited to dine with an eminent Episcopal clergyman of New York City, who was noted as a genial host and for the grace with which he presided at his table. Placing a fork in the turkey, without rising in his stirrups, but sitting in his chair, the good doctor laid the bird, well carved, nicely on the platter, entertaining all meanwhile with his wit and edifying humor. In admiration of his skill, I said, "Doctor, some day you must give me a few lessons in carving." "Indeed, I will," [illegible] you will find it easy if you will remember to cut off both wings the first thing you do, when you begin to carve." "May I ask why the wings should be cut off first, doctor?" I asked. "Why? so the turkey will not fly over the table."—Good Housekeeping.



Fibroid Tumors Cured.

A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time with[illegible] any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and today I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or [illegible] trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 [illegible] (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—[illegible] Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles, tumors, inflammations, ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, backache, irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Such the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily publishing in the newspapers, can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write her for further particulars of her illness. [illegible] Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound [illegible] great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly it is said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Hundreds of stars in the lovely sky [illegible] flowers in the sunny [illegible]

Always Darkest Before Dawn.

STEBBINS began the day by swearing at the clock for striking. His wife objected to his language. Stebbins laughed shortly. That was no language, he said; that was simply vocal exercise. Mrs. Stebbins insisted that it was language. He reiterated that it was not language. In the middle of his remarks he broke his shoestring. Then he did use language. He admitted it himself.

Stebbins scowled at the girl at breakfast. The girl scowled back. She was a good girl, and Mrs. Stebbins had just broken her in according to her ideas. To offset her husband's demonstrations Mrs. Stebbins smiled at the girl. The girl, thus encouraged, scowled to such a degree at Stebbins that he refused to eat his breakfast. He muttered something intended for a ringing defiance to every servant girl living and banged the door behind him.

On the elevated Stebbins sat down heavily on three stout women in succession and glared at all of them. He also jabbed an unoffending citizen with his umbrella and then insisted on an immediate apology. At Forty-second street, by some freak of luck, he was able to get a seat. He sat with his back against the man to the right. He wiped his feet on the man to his left. Naturally they objected. Stebbins, in a strained, honeyed voice, suggested their chartering a special car in the future. If they did not have the price, he kindly pointed out that a cab might answer their exclusive purpose. He felt a little better after that.

When he reached his office building the elevator did not stop at his floor. [illegible] opened fire on the [illegible] what the man meant by this thing? [illegible] insisted that the car go back to his floor and then refused to get off. He said he wished to say a few more things to the elevator man and would get off going down. Stebbins could not be ridiculed with by any mere elevator man.

Stebbins merely grunted when his office staff wished him good morning. He said that the air was bad in the [illegible] windows. As he sat in his overcoat, opening the mail, he noted with a certain amount of satisfaction that the clerks were working hard to keep warm. After he had become nearly frozen he kindly allowed the boy to close the windows again. He then asked the boy to call up a man on the telephone.

"Busy," said Central.

"What's that?" roared Stebbins suspiciously.

"Central says they're busy," reported the boy.

"Tell her they ain't busy," commanded Stebbins. "Tell her I know right well they ain't busy. Tell her to get that number at once. At once, do you understand?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy, humbly. He tried again while Stebbins impiously returned to his mail.

Central reported the line as still busy. The boy hung up the receiver smartly and tried to speak back to his desk without attracting Stebbins's notice. [illegible] and pushed out of his private office with a sweep.

"Busy, eh?" he said thoroughly. "Didn't I tell you they weren't? What d'ye mean? Ca[illegible] at once."

In another minute he was violently telling the manager what he thought of Central in particular and of the telephone management in general. After he had had his say he wrote a letter of protest addressed to the president of the telephone company. He was fighting for principle now and clinched his teeth on the determination to see the affair through.

Then Stebbins began dictating letters to his stenographer. He purposely mangled some of his words.

"What was that?" asked the girl.

"What was what?" he demanded fiercely.

"That last word."

"I don't know. I don't know," said Stebbins peevishly. "Begin that letter over again. You let me throw."

He looked at the girl with deep reproach. He began to think that she was in the conspiracy. When the letters were brought him for a signature he [illegible] important words with a fussy [illegible] and made them [illegible] over.

Then Stebbins wanted a paper from the boss. It was not there. Stebbins flew into a rage. He ordered that paper [illegible] Right away.

"Shall I?" he ordered grimly. [illegible] it or tell me it's lost. And be quick about it."

He went back to his desk while the clerks turned the [illegible] a search for that paper. [illegible] He gave [illegible] calling [illegible] for the paper. He [illegible] for that paper. FRIGHTFUL DISASTER

Royal Blue Line Flyer Crashes Into a Local Train in New Jersey.

MANY KILLED AND INJURED

The Death List May Reach Fifty—Flyer [illegible] Hit: An Hour When the Fearful Crash Came—Scenes Beggar Description.

New York, Jan 28.—One of the most appalling railroad wrecks that has occurred in the vicinity of New York [illegible] years, the estimated loss of life ranging from 12 to 30 persons, took place last night at Graceland on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, near Westfield, N. J., when the Royal Blue Line express plowed at top speed into the rear of a local train.

Immediately after the crash three of the shattered cars of the local train took fire, rendering impossible the rescue of many of the wounded who were pinned fast in the wreck. Many bodies are believed to have been consumed.

On board the flyer all the passengers, although badly shaken up, escaped uninjured save for trifling bruises.

The local train left New York at 5:45 and runs express to Bound Brook making stops at Elizabeth, Westfield and Plainfield. Beyond Bound Brook it runs as a local. The Royal Blue train left 15 minutes later but travels at a higher rate of speed and makes no stop except at Elizabeth and is scheduled to overtake the slower train just beyond Graceland where the latter switches from track 3 onto track 4 to permit the Royal Blue to pass.

Last evening a freight train was blocked upon track 4 and the local received orders to proceed on the express track to [illegible] and there take [illegible] track. Shortly after receiving orders the train had to stop for a hot box, which delayed it so that when it got under way again it was due at Dunellen. The train had just started and was moving slowly when the Royal Blue, traveling apparently at full speed, which at that point usually approximates 65 miles an hour, crashed into the rear end.

The heavy engine of the Royal Blue tore its way into the rear car and at the same time drove the forward end of that car into the rear end of the [illegible] into the third car and this in turn was driven into the fourth car from the rear. The fourth car was only partly wrecked but the last three were torn to pieces.

The engine [illegible] the rails and turned [illegible] on its side the engineer and fireman sticking to their posts and going down with the wreck. They are now in the Muhlenberg hospital at Plainfield and the engineer is not believed to have a chance of living more than a few hours.

Passengers on the flyer say the engineer applied the brakes hard just [illegible] or so before the wreck.

The train ahead had sent a flagman back but it seems he was recalled when the train got underway and, although the Royal Blue did not heed them or else was going too fast to stop in the short distance remaining. The man who went back to flag the train had just swung onto the rear end of his train and is [illegible]

The engine and three passenger cars were piled into a heap burning at least 100 feet and [illegible] Upon the mass crumbling screams for aid. A minute later the wreck caught fire from the fire box of the locomotive. The screams of the injured in the heap were intensified as they found themselves [illegible] the flames.

STORIES OF DE BLOWITZ.

Famous Correspondent Great Beat and His Dependence on a Wife.

[illegible] ent of the London Times in Paris, gave me a lecture of about an hour's duration on all manner of political topics, says a correspondent of London Life. His intellect, like others of his race, is sharp and his method of explication lucid enough. I may mention two of M. de Blowitz's journalistic feats which stamped him as the correspondent par excellence of his age. At the time of [illegible] was to be given on a certain Saturday morning, but although the [illegible] wire and published by the Times in a second edition on the Saturday at the very moment that the plenipotentiaries in Berlin were signing it. Needless to say that no other paper had it until the following Monday or to describe the wailing and gnashing of teeth in Berlin and Cologne and the other great newspaper centers of Germany. The second great feat of M. de Blowitz was that of interviewing the sultan. Such a thing had never been previously dreamed of, and, as M. de Blowitz rightly said, no one will ever do it again.

An anecdote is related of De Blowitz which illustrates how very corpulent he was even several years ago, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. When the miracles of Lourdes were attracting worldwide attention, the shrine was visited by many Roman Catholic pilgrims from England, including several members of the ducal family of the Howards, whose head is the present Duke of Norfolk. This was "copy" for the Times man, and he expressed a desire to accompany the pilgrims to Lourdes. Although a born Jew, De Blowitz was a fervent and devout Roman Catholic. Moreover, he was a [illegible] had his comfort.

When he applied to the Englishmen for permission to go with them on their devotions, they consented, but with the provision that he must not be accompanied by his valet—a matter which the pious Anglo-Saxons deemed [illegible] humility of [illegible] religious enterprise. The great man demurred. "How can I go without my man?" he asked. "Do you not know that I have not for years been competent to put on my own boots?" But the [illegible] were not to be ruffled by such pleading. "Why," they replied, "do not your [illegible] ostentatious as the great man was in the practice and precept of his adopted faith his lack of Parisian courage was shown by his staying at home in his luxurious quarters.

RURAL ROUTE CHRISTENER.

Novel Application For Position on the Postal Delivery Service.

A San [illegible] Senator Beveridge applying for a position as "rural christener," says the New York Post's Washington correspondent. At present no such position exists, but Miss Bird C. Miller, the applicant, [illegible] be [illegible] that the new rural free delivery routes are designated by numbers, such as Marion County Rural Route East 1 or West 1 or East 2, and so on. Now, at a reasonable salary, she would undertake to fit appropriate names to these new routes, such as Maple Dell, Silver Leaf, Primrose Valley, Daisy Lea, poetic temperament.

When Miss Miller's suggestion was forwarded to Superintendent Machen of the rural free delivery service, he replied that there had evidently been a mistake and that "rural route inspector" was probably the position desired, and in this office no vacancies existed at present.

"VAMPIRE" SECRET OUT.

Barnes-Jones Says That Mrs. Patrick Campbell Wasn't the Model.

The secret of "The Vampire," the [illegible] Barnes-Jones [illegible] by Rudyard Kipling [illegible] has been revealed by the artist, saying a Toronto special to the New York Times.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress, did not pose as the model for the creature who is taking the life blood from the lover. The model was a woman of Brussels, who was [illegible] posing.

"I want to lay the ghost of that story forever," said the painter as he nervously paced the corridors of the Art Institute. "The story [illegible] originated with me, and I do not know even how it did originate. I [illegible] to stop it forever.

"The fact is the picture was started by an old lady in Brussels. I made the study of the face of the girl from a Brussels model. I had her at so much a day, and, as it turns out, I made a lot by it."

NOVEL BIRTHDAY PARTY

Alfred A. Howlett Asks Syracuse Widows to Dine With Him.

HE WILL BE THE ONLY MAN THERE

Retired Banker of Syracuse Who Looks Forward to Celebrating His Eighty-second Birthday Has Engaged Waitresses and Orchestra of [illegible] and Twenty-five Fair Guests.

There are few more interesting characters than Alfred A. Howlett of Syracuse, who has announced his intention of giving a party to over 100 widows in celebration of his eighty-second birthday anniversary on Feb. 17, says the New York World correspondent. The guests will be the widows of men with whom Mr. Howlett was personally acquainted, many of them living in other cities. In accordance with his idea "not to have a man [illegible]" Mr. Howlett has engaged an orchestra of women and waitresses. The invitations have not been sent, for Mr. Howlett is waiting until he can think of all those he wishes to invite. He started with a list of seventy-five, but this soon got up to 100 and then 125, and finally Mr. Howlett said he had thought of several more.

For fifty years Mr. Howlett was president of the Salt Springs National bank and directed its affairs with great ability, resigning only two years ago on account of his age. He was formerly president of the Syracuse and Chenango Valley railroad and president of the Syracuse Savings bank. His name is [illegible] connected with a score of enterprises. He was one of the first salt manufacturers of Syracuse. He once ran a packing house in Geddes and later drove cattle on the Wabash river. He has made and lost millions. His health is excellent, and his eyes are bright. They twinkle when the widows' party is mentioned. One of his friends said recently:

"This party will lengthen his life. He will get more enjoyment out of it [illegible] the widows themselves."

Mr. Howlett has always been ready for a joke, practical or otherwise, and his friends are racking their brains to get some good one on him on the day of the party, which will last from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening.

To the correspondent who inquired about the dinner Mr. Howlett said:

"Boy, I want you to understand that the widows are the best people in this town. I don't propose to tell whom I invite. Widows are good company. I shouldn't wonder if they would all come. I have engaged an orchestra. [illegible] more can they ask, eh?

"People don't seem to remember that widows are most always left out of society altogether, and I want to give them a good time.

"Some of the men are jealous. They are trying to have fun with me, but if I live until the 17th of February that party will come off. My son has got to [illegible] am going to [illegible] talking all alone. Any man [illegible] anything around will get k[illegible]

"Two years ago, to celebrate [illegible] Mr. Howlett asked in ten widows whom he knew we[illegible] good time and told their friends so fine about it that he has been busy since explaining to other widows why he did not invite them. Finally he determined to invite every widow he knew. He was surprised that the papers should make a fuss about a man dining with 125 widows if he wanted to. His idea was simply to amuse his friends and himself.

Mr. Howlett has been a trustee of Syracuse university for several years. He is also a prominent member of the First Presbyterian church. He tells this story of how he came to be a Presbyterian:

"When I was married, I said to my wife, 'Minerva, where are we going to church?' She replied that she was a Methodist. I proposed that we go to the Unitarian church. My wife wouldn't hear of that, and finally I suggested as a compromise that we go to the Presbyterian church, as I considered that about between the Methodists and the Unitarians."

Five years ago he was at death's door, and a New York specialist was sent for. It was not thought that he would live more than a few hours. Wishing to find out if he had much fever, the specialist asked:

"Does he crave water?"

"Crave water?" shouted Mr. Howlett, rising in his bed. "I stopped drinking water in the sixties. Give me some whisky."

The specialist dropped the case right there and hurried all the way back to New York.

NEW KIND OF FISH.

Roscoe Thomas Captures a Monster Near Crisfield, Md.

Roscoe Thomas, son of James Thomas, of near Hopewell, Md., while out duck shooting in a small craft in Jones creek, near Crisfield, Md., saw a large fish trying to swim through the low grass in the Pocomoke River. The monster had got in the shallow water, pushing itself between the low grass and the bank, when Mr. Thomas' attention was attracted by the sudden thrashing of the fish. He immediately shot it.

The fish was about 120 pounds. It was five feet and one half in inch long. It has a mouth like a crocodile, two rows of large white teeth, and a bill resembling that of a duck. It was thought at first to be a boring hog, but since has been discovered to be a different kind of a fish.

JUDGE DAY IN COLLEGE

Secretary Hay's Classmate at Michigan University.

TRAITS OF DISPOSITION SHOWN.

Most Prominent Characteristic of the Former Secretary of State Was His Self Poise in Matters of Opinion—An Alleged Instance of His [illegible]

Reminiscences of Judge William R. Day's career in college are in course of revival now that his name has been brought once more into prominence, says the special correspondent of the New York Post at Washington. He is a graduate of Michigan university and while there lived for a time in the family of Judge Cooley, afterward the distinguished chairman of the interstate commerce commission. Day was then, as now, spare of stature and not particularly robust looking, but wiry and of strong vitality, with a fair taste for out of door sports, especially running and jumping, and not a bad ball player. His most conspicuous characteristic was his self poise in matters of opinion. There was nothing aggressive or bumptious about him, but a judgment once formed was sufficient for him till some one could bring him a first rate reason for changing it, and it made no visible difference to him whether his companions generally shared it or not. He was very studious, though not belonging in the "grub" category, and his quiet, unobtrusive manner and his almost shy way of retiring within himself when he preferred reflection to conversation were a bar to his making any very violent personal attachments among his fellows, though all held him in respect.

The expression of Mr. Day's face always impresses first observers with the notion of melancholy, and it is not till after acquaintance has ripened pretty well that the dry, quaint humor behind the solemn expression peeps out here and there. On the class day of the class of 1879, to which Day belonged, the "prophet" read a poetical forecast of the careers of the several graduates elect, in which these lines occurred:

Day is a clerical undertaker, drives a rushing trade.
And also drives a solemn hearse, keeps coffins ready made.
He advertises to look sad and weep—himself, at his own [illegible]
And furnishes mourners if required at just six bits apiece.
He keeps a mining engineer to scoop the narrow graves.
The [illegible] pleasant part that Mr. Wagner plays.

It must have been the painful duty of his biographers to record Day's failure to get through college. In mathematics he was, if not a dull scholar, at least a most uninterested one. He would overcome his difficulties by dogged hard work, but it was always a painful task, and he made no secret of the fact. He did manage to get through, and with a respectable standing on this line of study, though another affair threatened for awhile his chance of graduation.

It appears that while he was a senior [illegible] members of his class got up a burlesque on the programme of the junior exhibition. Such publications were against the rules of the university, and offenders were often severely punished. On this occasion the faculty [illegible] Day was the last suspected that the student committee would have a hole through the floor of the apartment in which the faculty conference was to be held. This was done; the entire proceedings were noted down by hidden eavesdroppers, [illegible] lots a fight that to save their own faces they dropped the whole matter. SUICIDE THE ISSUE.

Important Question Arising Upon Policies in the Knights of Maccabees.

[illegible] of which is of especial interest to the thousands of members of the Knights of the Maccabees, was argued a few days ago before Justice John F. Parkhurst at Bath, N. Y. It was a motion to set aside a non-suit in the action brought by the beneficiaries of Reynold Seybold against the Maccabees. The case was tried before Justice Parkhurst at Ovid last [illegible] a [illegible] and two children in Waterloo. He joined the Maccabee order in October, 1899, and died on January 2, 1900. Early in the morning of that day he was found suspended with a rope around his neck, and the inference was that he had committed suicide. He had been a member of the association four months, and paid in dues, etc., the sum of $8.40. Seybold took out a policy on his life for $3,000. The association refused to pay the beneficiaries, because of suicide within five years of admission. Decision reserved, but will likely be for a new trial.

A Buffalo attorney has been instructed by the Grand Lodge of the Knights of Maccabees to make an effort to obtain a reargument in the Court of Appeals of a decision [illegible] insurance taken out in a fraternal death-benefit association under certain by-laws cannot be affected by a subsequent amendment at a convention of the duly elected representatives of the policyholders. In the action the Court of Appeals affirmed a decision of a lower court awarding $2,000 to Amelia Weber, of Rochester, on a policy of $3,000 on the life of her husband, Frederick Weber, who committed suicide within five years after taking out the policy. At the time the policy was taken out the suicide limit was one year. The opinion also held that it is not necessary to make any stipulations whatever regarding deliberate intentional suicide by a person of sound mind.

An Atrocious Infanticide.

In North Towanda has been brought to light a terrible case of infanticide, as the result of the son of the Rev. F. I. Smith finding in the hencoop the mutilated body of a child that had been torn by dogs. Mary Chilson, 17 years old, for three months past a domestic in the family of Mr. Smith, was suspected. She was accused of the crime, which she at first denied, but later admitted, stating that in the bitter cold of New Year's night she gave birth to the child in an outhouse and placed the body where found. The girl continued at her daily tasks. She gave the name of the young man responsible for her condition.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and sometimes by driving winds and biting storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, lungs sharper, catarrh becomes more acrimonious and the many symptoms of colds are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people do not get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are real and permanent.

Avoid all strong inhalants and use that which is known and honored throughout the world—Ely's Cream Balm. It is a remedy for catarrh easily and pleasantly. Cold in the head vanishes quickly. Price, 50 cents at druggists or by mail.
